WEEKLY NEWS AND GOSSIP FROM AMERICA'S BIG TOWN

Guard Special Service.

New York, Jan. 7.—The most important event of the coming week is the annual meeting of the National Civic Federation. This is the eleven annual convention of the federation, and will be attended by governors of several states, bankers, merchants, lawyers, representatives of international labor unions and public officials of several states and cities. The state councils of the Civic Federation organized during the year will be represented by delegations. The principal subject of discussion will be uniform state legislation, but the delegates will take up several other important questions.

There are three automobile shows in New York today. The Grand Central Palace and the Importers' Automobile Salon is ending and the licensed manufacturers' show in Madison Square Garden is opening. On this one particular day there are not far from $5,000,000 worth of automobiles on view in this city. Add to this the accessories and the total will reach away up.

Fifty-five thousand sovereign waiters in this city and elsewhere threaten to strike if the arrogant head waiters carry out their plan to apply to them the Bertillon system of measurements now in use in the police department, for purposes of identification. The head waiters, who are organized, are in a quandary. They want to introduce the system as an additional assurance of the honesty of the waiters, and they do not want to provoke a general strike. If they were to do that the bulk of work in the public dining rooms would fall on the head waiters during a strike. Then who would the millionaires have to pattern balloon-vested, double-riveted, copper-bound dignity from?

Last week the cats had the days and nights, too, for they were on view at the Madison Square Garden, being compelled to make room for the automobile exhibit they could stay for a few days, but there was lots of fun while they were there, and more would have been going the rounds if some of the choice birds, in an adjoining room, had been let out. But next week it will be the dogs' day. Pomeranians of all sizes and ages will be on view at the Waldorf-Astoria, the exhibition being given under the auspices of the American Pomeranian club. Two hundred or more dogs will be bunched, with long pedigrees, beautiful coats and scant inches—their size being the only things short about them. There will be Poms and veterans of seven years. Poms of every known color, except pink.

New York has a feminine boot-black team whose duty it is to shine the boots of those who desire that service as they amble through the new Pennsylvania terminals' station. Ah, well, dainty women at the feet of big men, doing the service which hitherto belonged to the public's list of "menial" tasks, and therefore beneath the dignity of women may offend the public's taste for a time, but a lot of good, dignified and thoroughly respectable wives now have a field in which they have had experience opened up for them. It is an ill wind that blows dignity that does not blow emergency back to some stranded female.

A perusal of the social calendar will show a marked absence of cotillions this season. A few of these affairs will be given, but society is going in for other forms of amusement. There are several reasons for the change. For one, many of the best cotillion leaders are either getting too old, or too tired to go through the tortures of the new fangled affairs. Another reason is that the social leaders are taking to new things. Rink skating has grown to be such a popular sport, that entire evenings are devoted to it. It requires less formality, and is certainly more enjoyable. The rinks are large and well lighted places, with every thing provided that will be conducive to the comfort of patrons. Of course, ice skating takes the place of roller skating at this season.

Although Irish and German women as a rule are employed to clean the offices of most of the large business buildings of the city, for some reason colored women are preferred for bachelor apartments and small-scaled flats that are so numerous and convenient for business people. A bachelor apartment in the upper part of the city has a quaint character in an old negro who declares that her mother knew and worked for about every one a hundred years ago. Her daily labors bring her about enough for an occasional "hot dog" and beer, as "possum and sweet taters don't flourish in her neighborhood. The rest of her living she makes at present in a way that deprives you of her services on Thursdays and Fridays. On these days she stays in bed, not for the rest cure, but because the insurance inspector reaches her in his rounds on one of these days. She drew out a sickness policy, and as she is receiving $5 a week for being sick, she is careful to be found in bed. It will be another good thing gone wrong when the inspector turns up on some other day.

FADS AND FASHIONS

New York, Jan. 7.—Enter the debutante. And what a charming creature she is, or will be when Dame Fashion presents her to the world. Ambitious mothers in much the same fashion—an afternoon tea with simple refreshment, and the sisters and young girl friends of the budding diva are invited to the party.

The one note of novelty is always struck in the debutante's costume, which this year is white. More white than for many years is used by debutantes at their coming out reception, and their gowns make many plays on classical styles. The Empire, of more or less modifications, sometimes losing its type altogether, but for the high lifted waist—the simple Greek robe of scant, flowing line; phases of the directoire with the big waist and the tight skirt; and the kimono sleeve in everything—Greek, French and what not.

Any gown worn by a well-known society girl is draped in rather clever fashion. The underskirt of the gown is of silver cloth, veiled with all blue chiffon, and the waist, an ethereal affair, that has a most unsubstantial look in contrast with the tunic, is also of the chiffon, with silver trimmings. The drapery of the skirt consists of long, unshaded lengths of soft blue satin draped to cross at the front and back and extend into the train. All the edges of the satin are finished merely with the selvage, one of the small details of the modes that are at present running little short of a craze.

Frocks with the Directoire air are picked by the matrons as well as by debutantes, for the reason that their short, round skirts and dainty waists make the wearers appear more youthful. And yet, no matter how much money is put on these dresses, or how much embroidery and jewel trimmings they never merit any other name than frock, because they are so simple. There is a prim little air of the school room about them all.

However, with the gowns that employ the train separate from the skirt that is a different story. Nothing is more interesting, more graceful or more courtly than these dresses, and when the train is carried over the arm the ensemble loses nothing of its elegance.

Everything is put on evening dresses this year—pearls, colored stones, silk and chenille fringe, fur, flowers of gold or silver, lace, embroidery and fancy passementerie effects. Some dresses have a little of every kind, and when used with discretion the effect is not heavy. Tulle and mousseline are gaining in popularity, if that is possible. Yards and yards of it are put on everything. When one would think a dress all finished, and ready to be put on, there is yet an over dress of tulle or mousseline to veil the entire thing. The debutante wears white or something very pale and shimmering; more mature women don draperies of black or dark colored tulle, to enhance their beauty and elegance of their toilettes. The air of being enveloped in a cloud seems to take with the masses. The couturiers are mad on the subject.

One of the newest features of bodice trimming is beading. Its vogue is widespread and there is no limit to the game, and waists on which it may be used. The inexpensive and costly show it. Even the new stoics and muffs exploit beading in some form or other. An example might be given in a stole of black tulle designed for Southern wear. The stole has a turn-over collar of black, cut in revers at the front, and these are elaborately trimmed with white beads. The muff is of black satin and chiffon, in a sort of envelope shape, with a square turnover on the front of the muff. This square turnover flap is lined with black satin embroidered with white beads and the corners are turned back at each side. Even black velvet is embroidered with beads, but more slightly by far is chiffon, mousseline or silk. There is something naturally startling about black velvet and white beads in combination. The chiffon waists worked with Indian bead work are deservedly popular, and the prices are extremely moderate when the amount of work is taken into consideration.

One of the hopeful signs of the time in hand-made jewelry is fact that the enthusiasts who are doing the best work are not going to Italy, Germany or the Orient for their motives, but are finding for themselves in the fields, along the roadsides and on the meadows. The craze for "new art," so called, has happily passed, and that stage over, all that was good in it is being used in such work. Jewelry is certainly more popular this season than it has ever been, and even women of wealth are taking to the imitations, so cleverly are the designs filled with mock stones wrought.

Among the inexpensive ornaments is the abalone pearl, which has caught the rainbow tints of the sea and its wonderful iridescent blues and greens. In its loveliest shadings it suggests the black opal without the fiery gleam of the gem. As the abalone pearl has been used in the past it has been mediocre and cheap, but as the true artist employs it, its tones lend themselves to the color scheme for which he is working as nothing else can. This gem is set into all sorts of hair ornaments, pins, hatpins or brooches, etc., and will continue among the high favorites throughout the spring.

For designs, the dragon fly is very popular. It is done in natural colors and shadings in enamel, the eyes being of jewels and the body of silver gilt. Sharing in favor with the dragon fly is the bar brooch, while hatpins of carved ivory stand in a class by themselves as a new vogue.

Pendants of fresh water pearls are lovely, and these are combined sometimes with imitation rubies, real garnets, amethysts, opalines, etc. Color combinations are as much a feature of fashionable jewelry as they are of smart frocks, and the woman who can afford it has her jewels and gowns to match or harmonize.

RELIEVES OUT-OF-

ORDER STOMACHS IN FIVE MINUTES

As there is often someone in your family who suffers from an attack of indigestion or some form of stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapensin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapensin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieves at once such miseries as belching of gas, eructation of sour, undigested food, nausea, headaches, dizziness, constipation and other stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from indigestion and dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach, with the common every-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong or believe theirs is a case of nervousness, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach or cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, gas and stomach poison, which untwists in the digestive tract and intestines, and besides, poisons the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with a thorough digestion and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapensin.

KILL EVERY ONE.

National Crusade Against Dandruff
Germs Now Being Waged in America

"The dandruff germ is the greatest American pest of today," declares one of the world's greatest scientists and students of diseases of the hair. In a recent interview he said: "If the germs of the dandruff are not soon annihilated, the United States will some day be known as the hair-loss nation. The Americans must wage a relentless war of extermination at once, and I am going to help them."

"My receipt for killing dandruff germs, well known as Parisian Sage, is now being manufactured in the United States."

There is only one way to cure dandruff, and that is to kill the dandruff germs.

There is only one preparation that will kill the germs, and that is Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is now manufactured in Buffalo, N. Y., by the Groux Mfg. Co., and agencies have been established in every town in America. You take no risk in buying a bottle of Parisian Sage. Dillon Drug Co. is the agent in this city, and they will guarantee Parisian Sage to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, remove all diseases of the scalp, or money back.

Parisian Sage is the most marvelous hair dressing and tonic; it makes the hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant in one week. It causes hair to grow if the hair root be not altogether dead. The price is only 50 cents a large bottle at Dillon's, or direct by express, charges prepaid from the Groux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The girl with the Auburn Hair is on every bottle.
