THE TOMCAT

A strange, weird beast of dingy gray, he goes his silent, lonely way. Domestic joys are not for him—he wanders where the lights are dim; the fire-side, where the tabbies dream, to Tom does not allure him; no childish hands to him bidebeck, he wears no ribbon on his neck. He hears the marks of many scraps wherein he battled well, perhaps, and there are hammocks in his side, where buckshot mingled with his hide and he has spaces here and there where bootjacks rubbed away the hair. He looks up with his yellow eyes, so calm, inscrutable and wise, and takes a handout at my door, then goes, and comes again no more. He has no home, nor would have one; he has no friend, and asks for none. He wants no inglenook nor wife—adventure is his spice of life. For him the fierce and warlike screech, for him the imminent deadly breach, the midnight foray in the stums, with other martial feline hums. And if a mellow mood should start in his old tough and wayward heart, he'll sing a song so sad and strange that every blunderbus in range will send a pound or two of shot to cheer his harsh and irksome lot. And thus he goes his friendless way, till at the dawning of some day, we find him in the alley dead, all cluttered up with bricks and lead.

AVIATION LEGISLATION

From the San Francisco aviation press bureau issues the news that the first aviation legislation to be proposed in California will be introduced in the assembly by Assemblyman Fitzgerald and in the senate by Senator Wolfe. The bills have been prepared under the guidance of the Pacific Aero club.

The first of the laws regulating the use of air craft will consist of one requiring that biplanes and monoplanes will be designated as "motor vehicles," and that all owners register such machines with the secretary of state, who will issue a license number, to be displayed on the machine.

Following this are two measures designated for the benefit of the aviators. One makes the aviator exempt from exemplary damages where, to save his life, he is forced to descend from the air on the premises or property of other persons and that, in an action in which he is made defendant, only actual damages can be recovered.

The other bill, in the form of an amendment to the penal code, makes it a felony to shoot at a monoplane, biplane or balloon, while the crafts are in flight or operation, and makes the willful and deliberate shooting at any part of an airship in flight an attempted homicide.

This is the first state legislation regulating aviation to be introduced in the United States. It takes no extraordinary stretch of the imagination to predict that in due course of time aviation legislation will be as common as railroad legislation.

Oregon having tried about every other kind of legislation, its progressive law makers will soon have a chance to enter an entirely new field.

The official announcement that the Oregon Electric will be built to Eugene this year makes it almost certain that this city will have three new roads during the present year. The others will be a line to the coast and one down the valley to Corvallis. With the Oregon Eastern building across the mountains to California and the present Southern Pacific line, Eugene's ambition to become a railroad centre will soon be realized.

The O. A. C. campus was flooded this week for two days, and the students were compelled to paddle around in canoes. We may, therefore, expect that all the ducks and geese attracted by the flood will be officially enrolled in the next catalogue as students of the institution, as well as a request for an appropriation for buildings to house the increased attendance.

A canvass of 135 department stores in cities of more than 75,000 population elicited from 102 the unequivocal opinion, according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, that the evening newspaper is a better advertising medium than the newspaper published in the morning.

Would it be a real hardship on the state printer to make him work for a salary of $4000 or $5000 a year? If Mr. Dunnway thinks so he might resign and allow some one who has not become accustomed to making $20,000 a year hold down the job.

A census was taken of the late "Lucky" Baldwin's wives in court the other day and only four were enumerated. The figures were probably about as incomplete as the average returns peddled out by Director Durand.

The coming of the Oregon Electric to Eugene this year means a new era of growth and prosperity. Jim Hill never invaded any territory which did not immediately wake up and get busy along all lines of material development.

Bowerman says the state insane asylum has been wasting money. Possibly he is right; but why, as acting governor during the past year, did he not compel the management to conduct its affairs in a businesslike way?

The state senate is not in favor of the "Oregon system"—probably because a majority of the members of the upper house like the corporation system better.

The coming of jobbing houses to Eugene will do as much as anything else—perhaps more—to make a real city here.

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT POPULAR

tion quite fully and stood upon the vantage ground of knowledge concerning the matter. He said that the University took pride in the city of Eugene, and would gladly do its part to place it as the first city of the state. Referring to the conditions in California, Professor Young said the city of Berkeley, where the University of California is located, has made a success with the commission plan of government. The element of compensation is a business proposition, and this is a matter of business and not politics; a business that calls for study and keeping up with the times.

Mr. Svarverud again entered an appeal for the careful consideration of matters before taking decisive action, and he endorsed the stand taken by Mr. Bilyeu against the adoption of the resolution or any form of commission plan of government at the present time. He was followed by a gentleman from West Virginia, who stated that he was a newcomer here but had acquired property and was interested. He gave some very interesting figures and statements regarding the operation of commission plans. Then Mr. Bilyeu again spoke against the proposed resolution and bestowed a few left handed compliments upon persons who expressed opinions contrary to those he was holding. The gentleman following Mr. Bilyeu at this time argued well for every man to participate in the government of the city in which he lives, urging the election of a group of men who will constantly guard the interests of the people of Eugene, and he believed the commission form of government best calculated to give to us what we need. His argument that under a plan where the responsibility rested upon a few men the question of who is responsible for things done or left undone can easily be definitely fixed. The one fact, that of paying men for their services, was sufficient ground upon which to favor the plan, because no one need have compensation for holding said men responsible for their actions.

Van Hook's Statistics.
At this juncture Mr. Svarverud attempted to ask the question of bonding the officers under the new plan, but he lost the floor to Mr. Van Hook, who had come prepared to boost the new plan movement with figures and statistics showing its workings in Texas, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin and elsewhere and he thought Oregon would stand to try it. He doubted the probability of applying the new plan to Eugene, but emphasized the importance of great movement going on by referring to the many plans that are being considered at the same time as this time. He said that the only cure-all was good citizenship. A good point was made concerning the expenditures of public money and he challenged any one present to say that there could not have been a saving in the expenditures recently made covering the cost of Eugene's new water plant.

Attorney J. M. Pines, for the city, made his position plain and labored under the impression that the matter was greatly misunderstood. He referred to the necessary outlay of many thousands of dollars within the next ten years and asked the people to hesitate in putting these matters into the hands of a few men, for business reasons particularly. He appealed for ward representation and said that the closer a citizen can be to his government the better his condition, and the more representatives you have the better off you will be. Prof. Young spoke again touching upon the matter of franchises, showing that under the commission form of government the people have a large part. Then again Mr. Slattery's resolution was read. Mr. Humphrey followed with a most earnest talk in which he stated that for thirty-five years he and his father had been a part of Eugene and he regarded this meeting as the most important public gathering ever held in Eugene. He is thoroughly in favor of the commission form of government. He is sure we need a change and he looks with gratitude upon the assistance being received from the University source. Mr. Humphrey stated plainly that he believed the city of Eugene was lacking in business management of its affairs and needed men to bring it out of the condition existing, and he favored paying the mayor a salary of $2000 or more per year.

Big Vote for Resolution.
It was about 9:30 when the vote was called for upon the question of passing the resolution, and the arguments were so indefinite that Mayor Matlock appointed Attorneys Pines and Slattery as tellers and instructed them to take a recess to count the standing men. The result was unanimously in favor of the resolution. Then Prof. Young was called for a fifteen-minute talk, but he cut it down to a few brief statements, all right to the point. He stated that the people working upon this proposed system invited all counsel, advice and recommendations from that citizens of Eugene had to offer, disclosed by stating that this should be made the largest and best of Eugene has ever had.

Mr. Van Hook's statement to offer another set of resolutions but by amendment his motion carried to the effect that a committee of seven or nine men from various social organizations should meet with the charter commission, or first resolve the whole matter.

Attorney Ness brought on the light and water matter and said that those were already before the people for consideration at the coming election, matters of importance that should be made the subject of the new plan was under consideration.

thus avoiding complications. S. D. Allen spoke at some length and the meeting came to a close.

MARX DRY CLEANING

The art of Dry Cleaning is comparatively new, and is misunderstood by a great part of the public. Much of the so-called Dry Cleaning is "dry" but not "cleaning."

The inferior work is the result of the method employed by many small places who have no machinery or proper equipment for doing the work and consist merely in brushing the material, either by hand or with a small apparatus (so-called vacuum cleaning), and sponging the surface with a liquid other than water. This method cleans the surface of the goods to some extent, but leaves the dirt and grease on the reverse side and in the center of the cloth, and in the case of coats, trousers and other lined garments, the dirt is left by the inner-lining, padding, etc., and in a short time will work its way to the surface and the garment is as soiled looking as it was before it was cleaned.

Dry Cleaning in its proper sense means an absolute and thorough cleaning of an article, through and through, without the use of water. This is done by the employment of expensive and specially constructed machinery and appliances, the use of which are only properly understood by the chemist.
