

GREAT $10,000.00 CLOSING OUT SALE

Of Women's Ready-To-Wear Goods

By the Brownsville Woolen Mill Store, Eugene, Oregon

It's not often that a man's clothing store gets into the woman's goods business, but we are into it now, but not with our consent, so we are going to make the selling of it short and sweet.

The facts are these: Our big Portland store put their foot in it last season by going into the ladies' goods business on a big scale. One season was plenty for them, and they are now going out of it just as fast as they went in. In order to dispose of the stock quickly it has been divided up among the branch Brownsville Woolen Mills stores, and our share is $10,000. All the instructions we have is to close it out quick regardless of cost and they will stand the loss, whatever it may be.

We invite the public and friends of this store to a feast of bargains never before seen in Eugene.

Remember, this store will not under any circumstances carry ladies' goods after this sale, or about February 10th. Any articles not sold at that time will be returned to the Portland store. Below are a few prices, taken at random from the stock:

Misses' and Women's Coats; some are old style, to be sure, but they are made from splendid material, sold at $7.50 to $15; now $2.50	Three hundred ladies' Waists, sold at $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50; now 65c	A beautiful line of Infant Dresses; many of them hand embroidered; sold at from $1.50 to $4.00; now $1.00	Children's Flannel Night Gowns; sold at 75 cents; now 39c

CIVIC HOUSEKEEPING

Following is the report of the civics committee of the Fortnightly Club on the work done by Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, municipal expert:

There has been such an awakening along civic lines that scarcely a city remains in the whole United States that cares to be out of fashion long enough to inquire into better methods of civic housekeeping.

Our own city is not behind in this matter, as is evidenced by the work being done by the various clubs.

There is in this country an expert in civic matters—a woman—Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, a minister to municipalities. She visits cities by request and assists them in their housecleaning.

The Fortnightly club, being very much interested in her work, has through a committee, corresponded with her and received some pamphlets on sanitary surveys of cities, reports she has made after investigation, which give in concise form her method of procedure.

Thinking that the citizens of Eugene will be interested also in Mrs. Crane's work, the Fortnightly Club presents this report, compiled by the committee from the literature sent them, showing just how Mrs. Crane makes her sanitary inspection with the corresponding advice for correction of existing evils.

In reviewing her work it will be evident that our own citizens are not at all behind, either in their method of investigation, or in their ideas as to the remedies needed to correct wrong conditions.

The same work has been begun by the Municipal League, the newspapers, the University and the various clubs and organizations that would have cost us about $125 if we had had the services of a municipal expert. Mrs. Crane for instance, it only remains for us to continue the good work, to unshrink every sanitary condition, and thus complete our city housecleaning. Then, having learned how to keep house, we shall be the better prepared to keep it clean.

Mrs. Crane's first concern is the water supply. It is interesting to note how minutely she goes into details to discover the best way of treating this most vital matter. No one but a woman, a thorough housekeeper, would be able to see the little thing, the almost inconsequential ter will obtain many ideas from reading the pamphlets in full.

Garbage Collection and Disposal.

If this were regarded as a health measure, it would appear of more importance. The city must decide its own method of disposal, whether simple incineration, or reduction depending upon the size of the city and the nature of the garbage. At any event, an expert should be consulted on this subject, as garbage—that is, the organic matter, the paper and rags, and the street sweepings, ought to all bring in a revenue. Ashes can be used for filling in. A sanitary inspector should be appointed to look after manure piles and other nuisances around private dwellings.

Markets and Bakeries.

These are very thoroughly inspected, every evidence of cleanliness noted, every unsanitary condition mentioned—the conditions of tables, utensils, walls; the presence of animals, dogs, cats, etc., in bakeries; the proximity to manure piles and uncovered garbage cans, fly breeders etc. Every little thing comes under Mrs. Crane's note. Among other necessities she mentioned the use of paraffined paper wrappers for bread.

Milk Supply.

The milk supply, of course, is nearly as important as good water. This is commonly looked after by the health department, as many precautions are noted here for obtaining pure clean milk, as were mentioned in our own state dairy convention, held here last month. Mrs. Crane recommends that "certified" milk be demanded, which, of course, would mean extraordinary care, would cost more, but would also be worth more.

Meat Supply.

To be sure of sanitary conditions, there should be an inspection of the slaughter houses, a most inspection ordinance being necessary to obtain this. In such an event, we should be guarded from eating diseased, injured or insipid animals.

School Sanitation.

Under this heading, the heating, ventilation, lighting, cleanliness and fire protection of the building is looked after. Toilets, drinking containers, desks and chairs, sanitary napkins and everything that assists in rendering the schoolroom more healthful and sanitary, is mentioned.

Whenever a school building is not up to the standard in every particular, notice is made of each fact with the suggestion of the method for correcting each defect.

Kindergarten, manual training, household science, and playgrounds were suggested as necessary adjuncts to the modern school system.

DO YOU KNOW

That any creamery in the valley is using boiled water in its process? You know the Eugene Creamery does.

Tools for the Western Gas Construction company, who will erect the machinery and gas holder at the new gas plant, have arrived and letters have been received asking for information in regard to the supply of steam for the pneumatic riveters. This indicates that the start of the city will enjoy the music (?) of the rapid hammers tapping the rivets into the iron plates of the big gas holder for the next few weeks.
