THE BORES

One fellow leans upon my shoulder, when he would talk to me; and then I wish I had a boulder, to soak him two or three. It makes me hot as a hyena when I am used as a prop by some cheap human concertina who only longs to yawp. If I killed bores, and had to choose 'em, that bore I'd surely slay, who always paws my manly bosom, when he has aught to say. I do detest the bore who claws me, familiarly as death, the while he questions me or jaws me, or stuns me with his breath. I hate the bore with funny story, and prehistoric fibs, who, as he springs his legend hoary, must prod me in the ribs. Of all the weary bores I'm knowing, the one who breaks my heart, is he who says he must be going, and never makes a start. Some bores are dense, and others cunning, some sad, and others gay, some loth to speak, and some to punning and some to repartee; some run to brains and some to prattle, some always slam the doors; some bores will preach and others whistle—and bores are always bores.

BERGER STANDS FOR POPULAR RULE

Mr. Berger is a candidate for mayor at the coming election on a progressive platform, which means government by the people in the interest of the people. He stands for the ideas which have prevailed in our government during the past five years, and which have resulted in the city's acquiring properties easily worth a million dollars at the present time. In the years to come, with the rapid growth which is sure to come to Eugene, these properties will increase in value many fold if properly managed and cared for. It is, therefore, important that a mayor and councilmen should be elected at this time in full accord with the municipal ownership principle. We cannot afford now to take a backward step, but must go forward and strengthen the hold the people have acquired upon the valuable franchises and public utilities represented by a splendid water and filtration system and electric power and lighting plant.

Abraham Lincoln said it was bad policy to swap horses while crossing a stream—and Eugene has not quite reached the solid bank of municipal ownership, although it is plainly in sight now. Private corporations are still hoping to regain their grip on the utilities the people should of right own and control for their own benefit.

No intelligent voter, loyal to the interests of Eugene, should be deceived by the false issues raised by the opposition; the real issue in the coming election is the same this year as it has been in every election for five years past. It is the continuing struggle for supremacy between the people and the special interests, and Mr. Berger and his associates on the ticket, Messrs. Ludford, Striker, Warnock and Pickard, represent the people.

DESERVE PUNISHMENT

It is high time that these American citizens who insist on mixing up in the revolutions and insurrections involving the sister republics of this nation were taught that it is an extremely dangerous business, says the Butte Miner.

There are a number of Americans taking part in the Mexican uprising, and it is noticed that just as soon as they get caught and are threatened with being taken out and shot, just as their fellow rebels of Mexican nativity would be, they immediately make all manner of pleas to the Washington government to secure their release.

Usually their appeals avail and they are freed.

Now suppose that some hot-headed citizen should start a revolution down in Arizona, and a lot of Mexicans came across the border to help out the American rebels, and they should be captured, this government probably would not shoot or hang them, but it certainly would punish them by giving them a long term of imprisonment, and it would not listen to any requests made in their behalf by the Mexican government.

What is sauce for the goose ought to be sauce for the gander, but these American adventurers who butt into the domestic affairs of other republics never appear to take that view of the matter.

After the Jameson raid into the Transvaal, it will be recalled that Mr. John Hays Hammond, the famous American mining expert, and a number of prominent Englishmen who organized the raid were captured and sentenced to death.

Through the intervention of the British and American governments, these convicted men were finally let off with very heavy fines and decrees of perpetual banishment from the Transvaal were entered against them.

Several of these Englishmen when they returned to London were arrested, tried and sent to prison for inciting insurrection in the dominions of a friendly nation.

The United States would set a good example if it would take some of these American revolutionists when they return from Mexico, and send them to prison.

Such action would show that this nation is capable of dealing fairly by smaller countries, and it would put a stop to a lot of filibustering on the part of irresponsible citizens of this country.

An American who will take a hand in stirring up trouble for the government of a nation on friendly terms with the United States ought to have some punishment meted out to him.

The Willamette valley contains 4,000 square miles and it is one of the largest and most fertile valleys in the world. Because it is not densely populated and highly developed, is due largely to lack of railroad transportation. This need promises to be fully supplied within the next three years, since the entrance of the Hill roads into the territory has spurred even the Southern Pacific Co. into activity and together they will quickly supply the needed railroad mileage. Population in the valley is destined to increase rapidly for years to come, bringing with it increased volume of business through greater productiveness and new industries. Towns like Eugene will grow into important cities in the next few years.

This is the first day of spring according to the almanac—but the almanac is a little too slow for Oregon in this respect.

Soft nosed bullets are being used in the Mexican scrap—and a good many soft-headed Americans are getting mixed up in the row, also.

The American citizen who goes off filibustering in Mexico or elsewhere just because he is spoiling for a fight, should not expect this government to be very much concerned over his fate, if he happens to fall into the enemy's hands.
