COUNTY COUNCIL HAS ITS ANNUAL SESSION

Representatives of Agricultural Communities Meet to Plan Year's Work.

The Lane county agricultural council met in annual session Thursday to listen to a review of the work accomplished through the office of the county agricultural agent and also to plan work for the coming year. The council is composed of the various community organizations of the county and with H. C. Wheeler, master of Pomona grange, as president, and W. R. Wing, of Irving, secretary. The report for the past year was read by H. C. Wheeler, and was declared by P. V. Maris, state superintendent of county agents, to be one of the best he ever listened to. The work of the past year has been very satisfactory, but because of war conditions, and for other reasons there will be fewer projects taken up as such during the coming year.

Outlines Coming Work. N. S. Robb, county agricultural agent gave an outline of the six projects which will be pushed into prominence in his work the coming year. These projects will be as follows:

First—Organization of communities of the county for co-operation in agricultural work. This work will be pushed into as many unorganized communities as possible the coming year.

Second—Field demonstration. The demonstration of the value of lime, also of green manure and barnyard manure as fertilizers will be especially dealt with. The value of turning under clover sod will also be demonstrated.

Third—Live stock improvement. In this project the work of increasing the number of pure bred sires will be pushed. Also to increase the number of hogs and sheep in the county. Sheep, especially, have decreased materially in Lane county at a time when they are not only very profitable but are needed as a war measure.

Fourth—Rodent extermination. In the communities where this was taken up last year as a community project the results were good and these communities will continue the work and others will take it up.

Fifth—Potato improvement. Demonstrations in this line will be continued and the work of raising certified seed will be pushed. The agricultural agent will endeavor to assist to standardize the crop so that it will command top prices.

Sixth—Drainage and irrigation. Co-operative drainage and irrigation projects will receive attention, as well as assistance in the engineering problems given farmers undertaking individual work.

More Committees Are Needed. Paul V. Maris, of the Oregon Agricultural college, who is in charge of the county agricultural agents of the state, spoke on the need of more community committees to encourage and look after community work. H. C. Brewer, of the national labor bureau, discussed plans to handle the labor problem and meet the shortage bound to exist next year. The following members of the Lane county agricultural council were present at the meeting: H. C. Wheeler, Trent, president; W. R. Wing, Irving, secretary; F. B. Harlow, Willakennie grange; Charles Reets, Junction City; A. T. Miller, Trent; L. T. Ardite, Cottage Grove; Giles Phelps, Elmira; E. J. Johnson, Santa Clara; W. R. Lord, Irving; V. E. Grousbek, Creswell; A. C. Miller, Goshen; J. W. Bertsch, Thurston Club; Frank Taylor, Thurston Club; Ed. L. Ayers, Junction City; H. L. Plenk, Irving.
