ALIEN ENEMIES MUST TAKE OUT PERMITS

Subject to Internment if They Approach the Armory Without Having Such Permission.

All male alien enemies over 14 years must have permits to approach within half a mile of any armory or any factory making any product for the use of the army and navy of the United States. This rule has been in effect the past year and is being enforced more and more strictly. This plainly in its language includes not only the Eugene armory, but the Eugene Woolen Mills and the planing mills which are making tent stakes. The local authorities have received word that a United States Marshall or his deputy will be in Eugene May 31 and June 1, Friday and Saturday of next week to assist those desiring such permits. Alien enemies not getting the permits will be compelled to go to Portland to get them. The penalty of a failure to secure such permits may be internment for the period of the war. The notice received in Eugene follows:

"All German alien enemies are hereby informed that by proclamation of the president of the United States, it is unlawful for any native, citizen, denizen or subject of the German empire or of the Imperial German government, being males of the age of fourteen years and upwards who are within the United States and not fully naturalized as American citizens, to approach or be found within a half mile of any federal or state fort, camp, arsenal, aircraft station, government or naval vessel, navy yard, factory or workshop for the manufacture of munitions of war, or any products for the use of the army or navy of the United States without first having secured, from the United States Marshall in the district in which they reside, a permit so to do in compliance with instructions heretofore issued by the United States department of Justice.

"You will please take notice that the United States Marshall for the District of Oregon, or one of his deputies, will be at Police Headquarters in the City of Eugene on the 31st of May and 1st day of June, 1918, for the purpose of receiving applications of German alien enemies for such permits. This action has been authorized, for your convenience, by the United States department of Justice at a considerable expense to the government.

"All German alien enemies who fail to secure these permits will thereafter be liable to summary arrest and internment for the period of the war."
"G. F. ALEXANDER,
United States Marshall, District of Oregon."

WAR WORRIES UPSET HEALTH
It is agreed by medical authorities that worry affects the digestive organs. When the digestion is out of order, it throws the whole physical being out of gear. B. B. Hayward, Unadilla, Ga., writes: "Foley Cathartic Tablets gave me quicker relief than anything I have ever tried." They relieve biliousness, bad breath, bloating, gas, indigestion and constipation. No griping or nausea.—Sold everywhere.

ROSARY TRIGGER FOR DEATH TRAP OF HUNS

Shrine Filled with Explosive,
When Germans Retreat, Is Blown to Pieces in Test.

(By Rifleman Patrick McGill, Author of "The Great Push.")

(Written for the United Press)

London, May 3.—"Dirty dogs they are, and they never will change. It's in their blood to be foul and dirty."

The old soldier ceased, or rather suspended utterance as he sought in his mind for an incident to illustrate his assertion.

The talk in the cafe dealt with the Germans and their methods of warfare, and the men who were in the cafe at that moment had just come back from the front line. While they were there, their cultured enemy had turned a machine gun on two British stretcher-bearers who had gone out into No Man's Land to carry in a wounded German soldier. They had placed him on the stretcher and were making their way back to the home trench when the machine gun was turned on them, killing the two men as well as the hapless man whom they were carrying to safety.

Other similar happenings were recalled, and it was then that the old man spoke. He had been a regular soldier who had fought many battles and had lived through Mons, Ypres, Loos and the Somme. The old man knew the foe whom he was up against.

He knew their ways.

"It is in their blood to be foul and dirty," he repeated. "Atrocious and treacherous, they have no code of honor or chivalry in their get-up. I have seen them murder wounded, and kill women and children. That was in the early days when they rushed loose like wild beasts over Belgium. And I've seen the poisoned wells, the poisoned food and the death traps which they leave behind them when they're retreating from our fellows. Last spring, when they ran away with our men at their heels, I was one of those who followed them.

"Everywhere, in abandoned dugouts, houses, barns, and churches, in barrels left outside the doors of farmhouses, in shrines by the roadside, in barbed wire entanglements, there were all kinds of slaughter traps hidden.

"I mind coming to one dugout without a soul in it. I just had a peep in and I was careful not to touch anything, for I knew the men had left the place. But another fellow followed me, and as I went up on the parapet I looked back at him.

"Be careful and don't touch anything in there," I said to him. "You know what the Germans are like with their traps."

"I'll only look in," he shouted back, and as there was a long narrow branch blocking the entrance to the door he pulled it aside to have a peep in.

Branch was trigger.

I had just got away about a hundred yards when I heard a bang, and I looked back to see the remains of that dugout in the air. It was the damned branch that caused the explosion, and the man who looked in was killed.

"I saw another fellow dead in one of the houses at the corner of the village. He had lifted a book from the table of the front room, and this in some manner sent the table and the soldier up to the roof. And in that same house I saw a bucket of coal mixed with high explosives, and even the very stove was charged to blow up if a fire was lit in it. Even the chairs would explode if you sat on one of them.

"If you saw objects lying about you took no notice of them. Spades, shovels, helmets and souvenirs that were apparently flung away, and almost everything else were murder traps. I saw a young boy, a rookie, I suppose, going up to a shrine by the roadside with the intention of taking a rosary from the neck of the wooden statue of the Blessed Virgin.

"Don't touch that!" I yelled at him. "What the devil has it got to do with you?" he roared back at me.

"Everything!" I called to him. "And if you put your hand on it I'll put a bullet through your head."

"I took aim at him as if with the intention of firing and he got a bit frightened. Anyway he came back from the shrine.

Test Discloses Trap.

"I went up and had a look at the shrine. Round the neck of the Virgin the rosary beads were placed, with a cross hanging to the end of them. I looked at the back, and there I saw that the beads were tied round a little pin which was stuck in the woodwork. We tested it by tying a long string to the rosary and getting back twenty yards into a trench and pulling the string. The whole shrine was blown to pieces, for the tugging at the beads had denoted a charge and caused an explosion."

He paused.

"They're more beasts than men," said one of the listeners.

"They're devils from hell," said another.

"They're all that," said the old soldier. "But they can't help it. It's in their blood to be foul and dirty."

Men of Age

and amusements, excepting actual performers in legitimate concerts, operas and theatrical performances;

(E) Persons employed in domestic service;

(F) Sales clerks and other clerks employed in stores and other mercantile establishments.

As predicted some time ago by the United Press, the plan is one of the most drastic and far-reaching steps ever undertaken by the war department. The scope of the regulations will soon be extended, General Crowder states, by adding several more non-useful occupations to the list.

"Men who are now engaged as above, or who are idlers will not be permitted to seek relief because of the fact that they have drawn a late order number or because they have been placed in classes two, three or four on the grounds of dependency," the regulation states. "The fact he is not usefully employed will outweigh both of the above conditions."

In addition, General Crowder has provided that any local board will be empowered to force draft registrants to work whether it has original jurisdiction over the man or not. A man loafing around a Chicago pool hall, though registered in New York, can be sent to work or to the army by the Chicago board.

In determining idleness, regular vacations are not to be considered. Another provision is that wherein "there are compelling domestic circumstances that would not permit change of employment without disproportionate hardship to his dependents, or where a change would necessitate removal of the registrant or his family to another locality, the board may give consideration to the circumstances."

Where changes would cause night employment of women, boards are asked to take such circumstances into consideration in making their decisions. Showing the necessity for the step, General Crowder said:

"One of the unanswerable criticisms of the draft has been that it takes men from the farms and useful occupations and marches them past crowds of loafers and idlers. The remedy is simple—to couple the industrial basis with other grounds for exemption and to require that any men pleading exemption on any ground shall also show that he is contributing effectively to the industrial welfare of the nation."

"We shall give the idlers and men not effectively employed, the choice between military service and effective employment. Every man, in the draft age, at least, must work or fight."

"We must prohibit engagement by able-bodied men in the field of burlesque or ineffectual employment and thus induct the vast wasted excess into useful fields. We must not think of Germany as merely possessing an army, but of being an army—an army in which every factory and loom in the empire in a recognized part in a complete machine running night and day at terrific speed. We must make of ourselves the same sort of effective machine."

Scope of Air Inquiry to Be Extended, It Is Stated

Washington, May 22.—Attorney General Gregory and Charles Evans Hughes have determined upon a far more sweeping investigation of the aircraft production program than at first planned—and as a result the senate military committee probably will defer its action in the matter determined upon today.

The Gregory-Hughes probe will not be limited merely to charge of "dishonesty" against the aircraft board, but will be a comprehensive inquiry to determine whether there is need for civil suits as well as criminal. At its conclusion there will be a complete report of its findings for the American people.
