

QUAYLE RESIGNS TO TAKE POSITION WITH PORTLAND CHAMBER

Attorney Jerome Workman Elected as New Secretary of Eugene Commercial Body and Lane County War Board

George Quayle, secretary of the Eugene chamber of commerce and secretary of the Lane county war board, last night resigned his combined positions to accept a position with the Portland chamber of commerce. Attorney Jerome Workman, who has been chairman of the War Saver Stamp campaign in Lane county, and has taken a prominent part in various patriotic activities, was elected as his successor. The change will be made July 1.

"I am going to Portland to enter into a branch of the chamber of commerce work, the details of which have not been outlined," Mr. Quayle stated.

Mr. Quayle has been with the Eugene chamber of commerce as secretary for two years. The board of directors adopted a resolution expressing regret over his departure and declaring that his service had been efficient and effective.

Attorney Workman came to Eugene from Spokane, Wash., in 1912. He is a graduate of the University of Kansas.

President E. O. Inman, A. C. Dixon, Luke Goodrich and other members of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce made addresses in which they complimented Mr. Quayle and wished him godspeed in his new position. The resolutions adopted were as follows:

"Whereas, George Quayle, who has so efficiently served as secretary of the Eugene chamber of commerce for the past three years, and executive head of the war activities of Lane county for the past six months, has tendered his resignation to accept work more important to the state of Oregon; be it

"Resolved, by the directors of the chamber of commerce and the Lane county war board in joint session, that we accept his resignation with sincere regret and that we hereby express our hearty appreciation of his untiring efforts in conducting the affairs of the chamber of commerce and of the war board with such efficiency and loyalty and courtesy as to endear him to all the people with whom he came in contact. We feel that his ability and experience have been of untold value to these organizations and to the people at large, and that we only let him retire from the positions he holds that he may enter a broader and more important field of labor. We further extend to Mr. Quayle a vote of thanks for his whole-hearted co-operation in carrying on the work that has been so important to the people of this county."

ITALIANS CONTINUE THEIR ADVANCE

handful of bridges also were pelted with shells and air bombs.

Air Forces Active.

It is positively established that the enemy's losses are even greater in the retreat than as a direct result of the Italian counter-offensive.

Allied air forces were particularly active in harassing the Austrian retreat across the river at Falses after the enemy had swept by Montello. American aviators played a prominent role in this work.

Thousands of Austrians have been captured. Other thousands have been wiped out by artillery, machine gun and rifle fire, by air bombs and by drowning. Italian cavalry is pursuing the enemy far beyond the Piave. The horsemen are pushing forward toward the line between Conegliano and Oderzo. The infantry has followed the cavalry across and is operating on the east bank in three places on the 20-mile front between Montello and Pont De Piave.

Effect Uncertain.

General Diaz has made no announcement as to the extent the Italians will follow the retreating enemy. It is known that the greater part of the Austrian reserves are concentrated in the mountains to the north, which has now become the Italian flank. A considerable British force penetrated the Austrian lines on the Asiago plateau and returned with a number of prisoners, who may furnish valuable information regarding the enemy's intentions in this region.

Just what effect the Piave retirement may have on the expected Austrian drive southward from the mountains cannot yet be determined.

London, June 25.—The Austrian war office admits the Piave disaster to the extent of announcing that "by reason of the high water and bad weather," its armies evacuated "Montello and some sectors of the other positions which we had won on the right bank of the Piave."

Vienna claims that the order for the retreat was given four days ago, and that the maneuver was carried out with such secrecy that Italian artillery was inveigled into bombarding empty trench positions.

Some confusion exists regarding the number of Austrian prisoners. The Italian embassy here announced that 45,000 had been taken. This was confirmed by a Washington dispatch quoting the Italian embassy there. The official statement of the Italian war office yesterday, however, mentioned only 4000 prisoners.

The German war office reported artillery and reconnoitering activity.

"East of Badonviller, shock troops penetrated the Franco-American trenches and inflicted heavy losses. They brought back 40 prisoners."

(This probably refers to the operation near Baocarat, mentioned in dispatches from the American front.)

French troops took 170 prisoners in a local operation north of Le Port, Paris reported.

Field Marshal Haig reported successful raids in Flanders.

London, June 25.—Italian officials here today expressed the belief that the mention of "45,000 prisoners," contained in the wireless message to the Italian embassy, possibly was an error.

They said the despatch probably should have read: "Four to five thousand," inasmuch as last night's press messages from the front and the Italian war office statement did not mention more than 5,000 prisoners.

AMERICANS NOW OCCUPY ALL OF WOOD POSITION

Jenns completed their conquest of Belleau wood was one of the strangest of the war.

German machine guns, cunningly hidden in trees and on pulleys between trees, were fired from different points. Most of these enemy weapons were concealed behind rocks, however, from where they spat continuously.

The Americans crawled and wriggled forward, dropping with the aid of roots and branches down into declivities where they would lie motionless for a moment. Then they would resume their stealthy progress.

Eventually they armed over many emplacements, only to find that the hedges had fled with their guns, leaving the ammunition behind. A series of such evacuations resulted in an appreciable advance of the American lines.

Washington, June 25.—Further advances of American troops, made near Chateau-Thierry, were reported by General Pershing today.

"Local operations continued in the Chateau-Thierry region, where we made further advance, capturing five machine guns and other materials," the communique said.

"A German counter-attack against our lines near Torcy broke down with heavy losses under our rifle, machine gun and artillery fire. As the result of a raid executed by the enemy against our troops in Lorraine, several of our men are missing."

Paris, June 25.—French troops who advanced slightly northeast of Le Port yesterday maintained their new positions despite a violent German attack, the war office announced today. Successful raids were conducted in Lorraine and the Woivre.

"North of the Aisne, after violent shelling and grenade fighting in the Works, taken by us yesterday northeast of Le Port (six miles west of Soissons), the French front was integrally maintained," the communique said.

"There was fairly active artillery fighting in the Faverolles and Corey regions."

"Twenty prisoners were taken in three raids in the Woivre and Lorraine."

London, June 25.—British airmen made a series of attacks on Metz, Saarbrücken and Dillingen Sunday night and Monday, it was officially announced today.

The railway establishments at Metz and Sablon, and factories in Saarbrücken and Dillingen were badly damaged.

One enemy plane was brought down in flames. All the British machines returned safely.
