GERMANS ORDERED TO RESIST

has rescinded his order for a retirement and has decided to fight it out on the present lines.

By FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
With the American Armies in France, July 24.—(8:30 p. m.)—Despite orders to hold to the death, the crown prince's rear guard is being forced to give way before the allied attack along practically the whole battlefield.

Prisoners declare the units of the rear guard were ordered to remain at their posts and hold off the Americans to the last. Before the violence of the American assault they are being wiped out or taken prisoners.

The advance is proceeding cautiously at all points, however, owing to the great mass of German reinforcements and their increasing resistance. On many sectors the battle occasionally loses all resemblance to a rear guard action, and appears as though the Germans intended to make a permanent stand. New German reserve divisions are being constantly identified.

Fighting Is Bitter

The bitterest fighting is progressing north of Jaugonne, where the Americans are enlarging their bridgehead.

Americans are pressing northward along the main road from Chateau-Thierry to Fere-en-Tardenois in the region of Epieds (four miles northeast of Chateau-Thierry) harrying the enemy retirement toward Fere-en-Tardenois, one of their principal communication centers. In this region our forces captured Marie farm, an important strategic point.

Coming through a certain woods, an American unit found the boches had established machine guns every 10 yards. They were seemingly impregnable. The Americans massed as though for a frontal attack. While the Germans' attention was centered on these forces, other Americans made a wide, encircling movement, and suddenly charged the enemy from both flanks. They were taken completely by surprise and surrendered to escape slaughter.

Yankies Fish In Marne

Everywhere are the most impressive and unusual scenes. French and American soldiers are fishing in the Marne at points where the Germans so recently crossed the river. American troops, wagons and guns continue to pour across to the north bank.

In covering activities, American contingents are passing through Torcy, Boureches, Chateau-Thierry, Vaux and other historic points, which a week ago were held by the boches.

The results of heavy artillery fire are seen everywhere—dead boches, dead horses, smashed wagons, wrecked houses and trees snapped off like matches. Beyond Chateau-Thierry I saw a potato patch with most of the crop blown out of the ground by shells. In the midst of the patch was a shallow German dug-out, covered over by the foot-board and head-board of a wooden bed taken from a nearby house. The boche occupants had left blankets, coats and other equipment in their flight.

Damage Is Frankish

The villages north of the Marne are badly wrecked and display shell freaks that remind one of the queer pranks played by our American tornadoes. One shell hitting the side of a house tore off the wall that served as the back of a cupboard. The dishes stood revealed on the shelves, untouched.

Along the road near the river, which was held by the enemy a few days back, I saw prisoners at work filling in shell holes and smoothing the way for American wagons and guns.

The Americans are in the highest spirits, despite the fact they are literally snatching their food and rest on the run.

Men Bury Own Dead

Two doughboys, bringing in two boches, forced the latter to carry a captured machine gun. Then they decided their packs were getting heavy and made the prisoners carry them. En route to headquarters they came upon two dead Germans.

"I think the boches ought to bury their own dead, don't you?" asked one of the doughboys.

"Sure!" answered the other.

Whereupon they set the two prisoners at work digging graves.

The morale of the boche prisoner is very low. They are astounded at the power of the Franco-American attack.

Entire Crew of Torpedoed Schooner Reported Saved

Portland, Me., July 24.—All members of the crew of the schooner Robert and Richard, sunk by a German submarine off the Maine coast, were accounted for today.

A dory containing eight men was landed here, while another with four men was taken into Boston. Captain Robert Wharton and 18 of the crew have arrived at the naval coast patrol headquarters at this port.

EGGS WEIGH QUARTER POUND.
C. P. Van Houtte, resident manager of the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph company, brought a chicken egg which weighs one quarter of a pound to The Guard office today. The egg measures six inches in circumference one way and eight inches the other. Thieves have been stealing Mr. Van Houtte's chickens recently.

INFLUENZA IN SWISS ARMY
Bern, July 24.—Influenza is epidemic in the Swiss army. There are now 11,500 cases of the malady and 109 deaths have resulted.

ASSASSINATION ATTEMPTED

ALLIES REPORT BIG BAG OF HUN PLANES

Thirty-Seven Enemy Aircraft and Four Balloons Are Shot Down Monday.

Paris, July 24.—Thirty-seven German airplanes were shot down and four balloons destroyed by allied aviators Monday, the official air ministry communique issued today declared.

Franco-British aviators shot down 37 German airplanes and fired four balloons, the communique stated. "Twenty-nine tons of bombs were dropped on enemy concentrations and communication centers. American aviators collaborated with the characteristic pluck of the United States. They participated in the preceding days' victories."

London, July 24.—Destruction of one enemy airplane during raiding operations was reported today by the British air ministry. All British machines returned safely. The statement follows:

"In a raid carried out on the afternoon of the 22nd instant the main station of Offenbourg was hit and bursts were seen on the sidings. One hostile machine was destroyed. All our machines returned.

"On the night of the 22nd-23rd repeated attacks, attended with good results, were carried out against the enemy's aerodromes. Fires and explosions were observed. Other targets were engaged with bombs and machine gun fire."

artillery have been particularly successful in hitting these dumps.

The French today attacked astride the Courcy, crossing the Parc-et-Tigny road, toward Villersmontre (south of Soissons).

Americans Advance Northward.

North of the Marne, the Americans advanced to the Barillon wood line, passing the region of La Censeleux. Between Mont St. Pierre and Charleville, the bridgehead was enlarged and several farms taken, despite stubborn enemy defense.

Possibly the day's most important success was the Franco-British advance in the Andre valley, southwest of Rheims, where they took Virgny, a part of Andre wood, all of the Rheims wood and passed St. Euphrase.

I watched the progress of the battle from the heights of Montagne de Rheims this afternoon. In the beech and oak covered hills, directly below to the west, heavy forces of British troops were engaged. From the forests arose the crackle of machine gun fire, while the heavier note of artillery sounded more remote.

Fighting Hand-to-Hand.
Both armies at the time were engaged solely in bombarding the rear areas, as the fighting was mostly hand-to-hand and the canopy of trees prevented accurate observation from the battery positions. The gunners were afraid of hitting their own infantry.

German prisoners admitted their surprise at finding themselves opposed by British soldiers. Many of the German officers declared they did not know the allied counter offensive had begun on the other side of the salient.

Foch's Strategy Shown.
The experience of the British in this battle illustrates the versatility of General Foch's strategy. They were moved from their previous positions, some distance away, expecting to go to the defense of the Marne line. Suddenly, they were diverted to their present positions, arriving on the night of the nineteenth.

They were ordered to attack the next morning, at the same time, relieving the Italians, who had been holding the Germans successfully, but who needed rest.

The German fifteenth division already had lost heavily at the hands of the Italians. The British attack completed the work, almost annihilating it. Only about 500 men were left. Other divisions badly mauled were the 86th, 103rd and 22nd.

On the road to Epemay, Lorries and ambulances of all the allies passed each other in continuous lines. One ambulance was driven by a young woman in dust-covered khaki. Italian soldiers by the roadside waved to her and she smiled brightly. Later I learned she is Miss Matilde Bialdi.

Artillery Active

Paris, July 24.—Artillery fighting is proceeding violently between the Aisne and the Marne between the Marne and Rheims, the French war office reported today. German counter attacks west of Rheims were repulsed.

"Between the Marne and the Aisne and in Courten and Roi woods both armies were greatly active," the communique said.

"West of Rheims the Germans counter attacked at 9 p. m. In the Virgny region, the French broke the enemy assaults and maintained their positions."

Pershing Confirms Capture
Washington, July 24.—Capture of Jaugonne by American troops was confirmed today by General Pershing.

"South of the Ourcq our troops have continued to press the retreating enemy," the communique said.

"Our units crossing the Marne have gained possession of Jaugonne and the woods to the west."

"In Lorraine a hostile raiding party was repulsed by our troops during the night of July 22 to 23," section B added.

Nazimova, the great Russian star of "Toys of Fate," which will be the special attraction at the Rex theatre beginning today is surrounded with a brilliant cast of celebrated players in this screen classic production de luxe, released by Metro. Every member of the cast is well known to theatregoers.

NAZIMOVA in "TOYS OF FATE"

Charles Bryant, who appeared opposite the star in her wonderful picture, "Revelation," again is her leading man, essaying the role of Henry Livingston, a young American lawyer. Mr. Bryant played in support of Nazimova in "War Brides," both in vaudeville and in the screen version, and in dramatic productions such as "Pella Donna." He is also playing with the noted player in her series of Ibsen revivals on the speaking stage.

In "Shirley Kaye," Clara Kimball Young, who will appear at the Oregon theatre today, plays the title role of a young society girl, queen of the Long Island set, who is suddenly plunged into the whirlpool of high finance by the threatening danger of her father's overthrow from the presidency of the Union Central railroad, which her grandfather, "Pirate" Kaye, had founded. His two adversaries, T. J. Magen, a brusque western financier, and his young associate, John Rowson, she fights with different weapons—gaining the admiration of the first by the earnestness of her struggle on behalf of her own, and winning the love of the other, despite the fact that he "doesn't give a rap for any woman," especially easterners.

Whole Amazing Gerard Story Told in Wonderful Picture

The whole amazing story of Ambassador James W. Gerard's experience during his four years in Germany has been made into a remarkable historical film, which will be shown for the first time in this city at the Eugene theatre, Friday and Saturday, July 26-27, both matinee and evening.

This film, which is called, like his book, "My Four Years in Germany," was made with hearty co-operation of Ambassador Gerard, is endorsed by the administration, and is said to be a very marvelous dramatic picture.

Incidents described in a few words by the ambassador have turned out to be extraordinary scenic subjects, and full advantage is taken of them on the screen. For example, one of the most dramatic moments in history occurred 30 days before the war at Kiel week. Mr. Gerard stood on the deck of the imperial yacht while the kaiser stood beside him and watched the entrance of the British fleet for a friendly celebration.

The kaiser knows that within a month that fleet would be all that stood between him and world dominion.

That evening there was a dinner to the admirals of the British fleet. The kaiser could not bring himself to attend. It was his brother, Prince Henry, who closed with a toast to his visitors, in which he said, "We are sorry you are leaving and sorry you came."

HUSSAUER SUCCEEDS SEYDLER
Amsterdam, July 24.—Former Minister of Public Instruction Hussauer, has succeeded Von Seydler as head of the Austrian cabinet, despatches from Vienna today declared.

It had been reported that Count Czernin, former Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, was trying to form a cabinet, of which he would have been the prime minister.

MAIL CARRIER STRIKE
Ottawa, Ont., July 24.—Mail carriers today were on strike in many towns and cities of Canada, including Toronto, Peterboro, Winnipeg, Brandon, Calgary and New Westminster. Trouble in Montreal has been avoided through promises of bonuses to married men.

Rev. James Holburn, of Aylth, Perthshire, England, a Y. M. C. A. war work secretary, was dangerously wounded at the front during the recent drive. He lost his right eye.
