UNION LABOR ASKS NEW TRIAL OR FULL PARDON FOR MOONEY

Speaker Addressing Chicago Meeting Suggests Sending Troops to California to Insure Release.

San Francisco, July 29.—An unconditional pardon or a new trial for Thomas J. Mooney is the demand of labor unions and members of the International Workers' Defense League.

Resolutions passed at the Mooney mass meeting yesterday expressed dissatisfaction with the reprieve granted Mooney Saturday by Governor Stephens.

John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor and member of President Wilson's mediation commission, addressed several thousand people at the mass meeting. He asserted that Mooney had been convicted on perjured testimony, and that American labor will not be satisfied with half way measures in disposing of the Mooney case.

Chicago, July 29.—Sending of United States troops into California to insure the pardon of Thomas Mooney, sentenced to death as the San Francisco preparedness parade bomber, was proposed here by Frank P. Walsh, labor chairman of the war labor board.

Walsh, speaking before 20,000 union men here yesterday stated some such move would be necessary to preserve the morale of American workers. A resolution, presented by Walsh, branded the testimony against Mooney as the "lying testimony of a piratical crew of criminals, drug addicts, immoral women and professional perjurers."

"In the light of recent events," Walsh said, "it is easy to believe the bomb outrage was a part of German propaganda."

Constance Talmadge, Select comedienne, threatened a strike the other day if her next play contains so much as a foot of rain.

Before her departure for the coast, Miss Talmadge finished an earlier release, "The Studio Girl." As a great many of the scenes called for rain, the picture was taken in all kinds of raw and disagreeable weather. She declared it would be the death of her, but stuck gamely to her post, ruined one frock after another—among them a white satin wedding dress—but in the end turned out a winning picture which offsets somewhat the anguish which had gone into its making.

With the last dressing, however, she raised her right hand aloft and said the usual thing, then took the next train out to Sunny California. For the first six weeks, while filming "The Studio Girl," she lived a comparatively dry existence, not even a fog coming her way, but with the beginning of work on "Up the Road with Sally," her troubles recommenced. Again she was forced to don her stuffer and brave the elements.

But now that "Up the Road with Sally" is completed, she has set her feet down hard and laid emphasis on her refusal to participate in any more rain parties. Sunshine or nothing for Constance Talmadge from now on.

"Up the Road with Sally," in which this star is presented by Lewis J. Seitz, marks her return to the screen comedy drama in which she is such a brilliant success. The scenario has been written by Julia Crawford Ivers from the book of the same name by Frances Sterrett, and the direction has been in the hands of William D. Taylor. "Up the Road with Sally" will be seen here at the Oregon Theatre today.

GRIMES NOW ABLE TO STRAIGHTEN UP

Had Suffered Torture with Rheumatism for Ten Long Years.

"I actually gained ten pounds on two bottles of Tanlac, and it has fixed me up in splendid shape after everything else had failed to do me any good," said C. H. Grimes, a well known carpenter, of 164 Roy street, Seattle, Wash.

"For ten long years I suffered tortures from indigestion and rheumatism," he continued, "and during the past two years I became very much worse. Last summer I was in such bad shape that I was barely able to get around, and just one month ago I felt so miserable that I was afraid I'd have to go to bed and stay there. My stomach was in such an awful fix that I could hardly take any nourishment at all. What little I did force down soured on my stomach and swelled me up so I could hardly breathe, and I was so weak that I could hardly walk a block without giving out. My head ached like it would split, my kidneys gave me no end of trouble and I had such an awful pain in my back at times that I felt like I couldn't stand it. Every muscle in my body ached with rheumatism and my joints would get so stiff that I couldn't straighten up. My right leg was lame from the knee down and I could scarcely use my right hand at all. My face was so drawn and sunken in that anybody could see that I was a mighty sick man."

"I reckon I took about every medicine there is in the market, trying to get well, but I grew worse instead of better. I hoped against hope, though, and when I heard so much about Tanlac I decided to try it next. As soon as I started on my first bottle I felt like it was beginning to straighten me out, and soon I realized that at last I had found what I needed. Well, sir, my appetite has picked up so wonderfully that I am always the first at the table and the last to leave. My stomach is in fine condition, and I can eat anything I want without having a bit of trouble afterwards. My kidneys are working all right, too, and that awful pain in my back is clean gone. I haven't a twinge of rheumatism about me and I am taking on weight so fast that my face has filled out and I look like a different person. Tanlac has helped me so wonderfully that it is hard for me to tell how grateful I am for all it has done for me."

AMERICANS FOLLOW UP ADVANTAGE

were pitching their big shells in a near-barrage this side of Fere-en-Tardenois, Oulchy-le-Chateau and Oulchy-le-Ville. The air was filled with rumbling of the cannon and the clatter of machine guns, with which the Germans were being drummed out of their pocket.

From all parts of the rolling expanses, flashes as of a hand mirror in the sun, told where the 75's busily slammed away. High above the horizon, shrapnel burst unceasingly, forming an effectual barrier against Hun airplanes.

In this manner the French "duster proceedings" were being carried out, economizing on lives and teaching the Americans to do the same. The same purpose is partly responsible for the splendid use of small tanks during the past several days. Their value has been proved since the 18th in nearly every action. They have destroyed 25 machine gun nests, allowing the infantry to come up and take the guns without loss. All tanks have made at least two expeditions daily, some as many as five, and some being in action continuously for 30 hours.

Perishing Confirms Capture

Washington, July 29.—Capture of Seringet-Nesles, Sergy and Roncheres by American forces was reported today by General Pershing.

The communiqué follows:

"July 28.—North of the Marne our troops continue the pursuit of the enemy. In spite of his determined effort to delay their progress by rear guard action, they have crossed the Ourcq and have taken the towns of Seringet-Nesles, Sergy and Roncheres."

STRIKERS RESUME WORK

London, July 29.—Striking munitions workers in Coventry, the center of the present disturbance, decided at a mass meeting today to resume work immediately and accept the government's offer of mediation.

the conscience of the individual. This is the historic position of the Presbyterian church, often concealed under the narrowness of some age or individual, but existing as an original and essential foundation of our church.

Too Much Waste.

"Here in the light of the 20th century, and in the presence of the waste and inefficiency which mark the individual churches of Jesus Christ, we send forth this challenge and declare this platform of association with our fellow Christians.

"That is the statement, in substance, as I have formulated it, and which I will soon issue for the synod. Our belief is that matters of form should be left to individual decision. There are questions which can never be settled. Upon them there is not data enough to make a decision. Why then should we make them the test. My position is this: 'Answer not to me, but to God.'

"Speaking as one man it is my own conviction that there is little hope of any union or large movement of co-operation arising from the side of the churches now organized, that is from the ecclesiastical side, and I would suggest that the communities take the matter into their own hands and bring about some form of co-operation—especially the young men and women of the villages and country where the need is most keenly felt.

Main Function is Failure.

"There are communities with so many churches that from 200 to 500 people are the limit to their congregation, and yet there are districts containing many hundreds without any minister or any church whatsoever, and in which the intellectual and moral life is on a low plane. The church has thus failed in filling its function as a social uplifter and inspirer.

"Myrtle Creek is an example. There the church is completely neutralized. There are five churches, and the population is so small that every church has been forced to close its doors.

"Certainly at least for the war this plan offers an opportunity for greater Christian service on the part of us all."

Supported by dainty Louise Huff, Jack Pickford, the popular screen star, will be seen in his new Paramount photoplay, "Sandy," which is to be presented at the Rex Theatre today. The production is said to be one of the best in which young Pickford ever has appeared and Manager McDonald is arranging to make this an epochal event at his house.

The story is based upon the novel by Alice Hegar Rice which was one of the "best sellers" several seasons ago. It has to do with the fortunes of a young Scotch emigrant who stows himself away in the hold of a steamship and comes to this country. He meets a dainty blue grass belle on shipboard and later follows her to Kentucky. She has a dissipated brother who causes a lot of trouble, and Sandy, cast into a new and loftier environment, develops many traits which enable him to fight his own battles successfully and ultimately to win the girl his heart has chosen for his mate.

HUN ARMIES DRAWING OUT OF BAG

northwestward through Soissons. The Vesle flows northward through Rheims, converging with the Aisne about six miles east of Soissons. It forms practically a straight line between Rheims and Soissons. The Aisne flows straight westward through Soissons, passing Rheims about 12 miles to the north.

The biggest American advance since the start of the Franco-American push was carried out across the Ourcq, near Sergy (three miles on the right and left sides of the river sent the boches further back.

Yankees Drive Steadily On.

The Americans steadily advanced all day yesterday through a heavy rain. They fought through tangled, narrow paths in woods and across fields, routing out machine gun nests and pushing on as resistance was demolished.

One regiment marched and fought 16 1/2 miles in 24 hours, in order to keep up with the faster moving units in other parts of the line, where the resistance was lighter.

At 9 o'clock this morning, American machine guns were stationed on hill 141, outside Fere-en-Tardenois, sweeping the avenues of retreat from the city. Our artillery was brought up to the heights outside Sergy.

Such towns as Roncheres, Fresnes (four miles south and east of Fere-en-Tardenois) and Courmont (a mile north-east of Fresnes) were completely enveloped and passed. Village after village fell to the Americans.

Machine Guns Resist.

Two main points of resistance were encountered—the first at Croix farm; the second at the Ourcq. Both were thick with machine gun defenses. The gunners maintained their fire as long as possible, then withdrew, set up their guns and again resumed firing until they were wiped out.

The Americans swung forward two or three kilometers (a mile and a quarter to a mile and three-quarters,) after disposing of one line of machine gun defense before encountering the next. Then the fight would be repeated.

Nothing to It At All.

I asked a wounded doughboy how they cleaned up the nests. He explained: "When we rushed 'em, we'd yell: 'Over the top, fellows! Get 'em! Then we'd run forward, firing. That's all."

There are many additional prisoners, but they include few machine gunners. The Americans killed or wounded practically all of the latter, who were left behind as sacrifices.

An intensified war of movements has again set in, with renewed momentum. The armored cars are being used in reconnaissance.

New Yorker First Across.

When the Americans approached the Ourcq they were first held up by artillery and machine gun fire. A sharp fight ensued. Then the artillery came up behind our infantry and the resistance was wiped out.

The general withdrawal from the bottom of the pocket took place Friday night and Saturday. German artillery fire began to decrease in volume, apparently because of the movement of batteries to the north of the Ourcq.

The Americans captured thousands of rounds of machine gun ammunition and many very large dumps of large and small caliber shells along the north and south road in Fere forest.

Wounded men returning from the fight are in the highest spirits. Most of their wounds are machine gun bullets in the arm or leg. All of them expressed regret at leaving the fight. They said that wherever the enemy lines broke the boches turned and ran in an effort to escape. Prisoners include members of the Prussian guard, who were shot out of trees where they were operating machine guns.

American headquarters are kept jumping forward. One general this evening was asked by an aide where his new headquarters was. The general replied: "I'm sorry but I don't know. I haven't had a chance to look."

A letter taken from a prisoner indicates the Germans hope for a victory this summer has passed and that they are already being "equipped for another winter campaign. Other letters tell of the violence of the American fire.

"When they fire, it is like hell. We think every hour is our last," said one.

A letter received by a soldier from a relative in Magdeburg said:

"It is clear we are being trampled down. If the end does not come soon, some sort of an outbreak cannot be avoided. I can't trust all my thoughts to a letter."

The violence of our artillery fire is further illustrated by the capture of great numbers of smashed locomotives and other equipment the boches needed to facilitate their retirement. All railways and roads are under continued artillery fire and airplane bombing.

You Can't Rub It Away; Rheumatism is in the Blood

Liniments Will Never Cure. If you are afflicted with Rheumatism, why waste time with liniments, lotions and other local applications that never did cure Rheumatism, and never will!

Do not try to rub the pain away, for you will never succeed. Try the sensible plan of finding the cause of the pain, and go after that. Remove the cause, and there can be no pain. You will never be rid of Rheumatism until you cleanse your blood of the germs that cause the disease. S. S. MORE THAN 200 MEN ACTUALLY ENROLLED FOR TRAINING CAMP

Great Interest Shown at Portland in Course of Training Which Will Open at University of Oregon Saturday.

More than two hundred men have already been actually enrolled for the second summer training camp to be conducted at the University of Oregon, August 3 to 11. The number to be accepted will probably be about 300, according to Lieutenant Colonel John Leader, commandant.

Colonel Leader is expected home Monday. It was announced that Colonel Bowen would remain over in Portland for another day to confer with men who desire to enter the summer camp or who contemplate making applications for the admission to central officers' training camp.

"We could get a 1000," is the word received from Colonel Leader regarding prospects for attendance at the second summer camp. "We find that a great many of the applicants are men who put in a month at the first camp."

More than 50 men alone from Portland were enrolled for the second camp by Colonel Leader while in that city Saturday.

Captain Karl W. Onthank, of Colonel Leader's staff, and Major Charles Comfort, of the student battalion, have been in Portland assisting Colonel Leader with the work of enrolling applicants.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Back-ache or have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which exerts, and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; by moving all the acids, waste and poisons you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sciatic headache, dizziness, your stomach soon turns sour and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's uric acid, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then be fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.
