As The World Wags

By Frank Fay Eddy

THE OLD GRADS came and went. They, after all, represent the University, are indeed the incarnation of it. It is in them that the University lives and has expression. There is something very wonderful about a man in which a great school or college has a continuity of life which flows on from generation to generation; how old associations and traditions cluster about it; how it catches up a youth in his plastic years and makes its impress upon him. He is like so much metal which goes through the mill and comes out with the impression of the nation which issues it as a token of value.

ALL THIS is more evident in connection with the older colleges of the east for there has been time with such institutions as Harvard and Yale for this wealth of association and custom to gather force. But with the comparative youth of universities of the west we can see already a similar development.

ONE COMES back to meet the old fellows he used to know and exchange stories with the under-graduates about the way in which college customs were observed in his time as compared with the effects present. One comes back to breathe into the old fraternity, perhaps meet Bill or Jim, grown stouter and possibly a trifle bald or gray, but otherwise looking quite natural. All this is something which evolves without much reference to retrospectives to study and the ostensible work of the college. It is the indescribable and intangible thing which is the very breath of life in a college.

IN A LARGER WAY the same thing takes place with all institutions. Great executives in business strive to create something of the same esprit de cord in their plants and a state or nation is strong only as it is tied together by common sentiments in some such way as is the life of the past and that of the present in a great college.

LIVE INTO IT is the advice any Old Grad would give to the student of this year. The knowledge one acquires in college is good but it is only part of the gain. The rest comes from a kind of process of absorption which makes one all his life different, in fact, makes him one of the "Old Grabs."

SNOW STORM FORGES AVIATOR INTO WATER

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 21.—Forced down in the blinding snow storm off Jefferson Head, Eddie Hubbard, Seattle mail pilot, battled with the icy waves for nine hours last night before his weakened plane was washed ashore at Agate Point, across the bay from Port Madison on Puget Sound.

C. W. Bandy, his companion, is reported missing. He left Hubbard in the crippled plane and paddled off on a pontoon in search of assistance.

He has not been heard from since and the gravest fears are held for his safety. Despite his weakened condition, as the result of his long battle against the elements, Hubbard is directing the operations of a small fleet of launches which are searching the sound for Bandy. Only meager details have reached Seattle about the accident.

Hubbard and Bandy left Sunday morning on a duck hunting expedition and the accident happened while they were on their way back to Seattle.

Death Cheats Woman Nurse of Pension After Long Wait

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Al. Bailey, 75, nurse in three wars, received word from Washington a few days ago, that her pension from the government, which she has been fighting for 20 years, would be granted.

But the pension will come too late. She died last night.

Mrs. Bailey nursed in the Civil war, when she was only 15 years old, and also in the Indian and Spanish-American wars.

26 Boys Enrolled for Willamette Conference

Twenty-six Eugene boys have signed up for the Willamette Older Boys' conference which begins in Corvallis next Friday afternoon, according to W. H. Walter, boys' secretary of the local association. Nearly 50 boys met yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. and made plans for the Eugene delegation.

Dr. E. C. Sisson, of Reed college, addressed forty Eugene men at the final meeting of the week of prayer at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. The week of prayer has been very successful in attendance, there being about 40 men present at each luncheon.

Madalyne Obenchain's Hearing is Postponed

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 21.—Madalyne Obenchain's hearing on a writ of habeas corpus demanding that she be granted an immediate trial in the murder of John Belton Kennedy, was postponed today by the appellate court. Decision on the writs will be made Wednesday.

The postponement was granted at the request of attorney Davis acting chief counsel for Mrs. Obenchain. Davis requested the delay upon two grounds:

1.—That his client is seriously ill and confined to bed at the county jail.

2.—That some contingency may arise before Wednesday to cause the defense to abandon argument on its writ of habeas corpus. In a brief statement to the court, Davis indicated that Madalyne may go to trial this week.

The motion for delay was not opposed by Deputy District Attorney Charles W. Fricks, representing the prosecution.
