

COUNTY COURT TO RAISE CITY SCHOOL LEVY ABOUT $14,000

The county court was appraised of the fact today that it would have to vote a levy of nearly $14,000 to take care of the sinking fund and interest on bonded indebtedness of Eugene school district No. 4, because the levying board of that body had failed to include it in the budget. Although it came as a surprise to the county court and a greater surprise to Assessor Herbert Walker, who has the school tax levy already entered on his rolls, members of the school budget committee say they were aware of it all the time. School Clerk O. H. Jones says the matter was explained to the school taxpayers at the budget meeting.

Under the law, if the school levying board fails to provide the necessary money to take care of bonded indebtedness, the county treasurer shall notify the county court who must make the levy. Miss Edna Ward, county treasurer, proceeded to do this this morning.

While Judge Barnard is in Salem Commissioner M. H. Harlow said that probably the court would hold a meeting tomorrow morning before the taxpayers' meeting and fix the levy. In the meantime Assessor Walker's force will do a "powerful lot" of erasing.

A levy of $8000 is required to take care of the interest on the bonded indebtedness and $5000 for the sinking fund. The school board and the county court both forgot to make the levy last year and the school directors had to take the money out of other school funds.
