CREEL'S FILMS STILL BEING SHOWN TO JAPS

By CLARENCE DUBOSE (United Press Staff Correspondent) Tokyo (By Mail)—George Creel is still going good in Japan. His Committee on Public Information American propaganda pictures are playing to crowded houses throughout the Empire. Every important moving picture house in Nippon is getting a whirl at some of the war-time films that were made to show the world what America was doing. Michio Kaku, of the Japanese foreign office, who was stationed at Washington for some time, in an important post in the Japanese Embassy, secured the pictures from government officials in Washington and brought them to Japan. Kaku, who is indefatigable in his efforts for the promotion of better understanding of the conditions in America and Japan by the people of each country, is highly pleased with the hit these pictures are making here. "These pictures," he said, "are getting out into the remote rural towns of Japan, into the little places into what you would call cross-roads burgs. They are also being shown in every great city. Many thousands of Japanese, to whom America has been a vague thing, unknown or misunderstood, are getting through these pictures their first concrete visualization of that country—and it is a favorable one." The pictures, some twelve reels, depict "industrial America." They were designed for war morale stimulation. They are proving to be a fine free ad for America here, long after the war has ended. Kaku is on the trail of another flock of films showing other phases of life and activity in the United States. Through his efforts the Foreign Office will also furnish these free to theatres throughout Japan as a means of promoting friendship and understanding between the two countries.

Native Herd of Elk Roam In Last Stand in Oregon

Clatskanie, March 21.—A native elk herd of between 30 and 40 fine animals, still roaming the old haunts on the Nehalem, which were once the big game hunting grounds of the state, are now in their last stand in the green timber on the head of Big creek with four logging companies cutting toward them. But this seems to worry the elk very little, according to reports brought here by loggers of the Oregon Timber company. So tame have the great beasts become that it is not infrequent to see them in the edge of the timber near where the loggers are at work, and some of the men are said to have come within 50 feet of them. Two great bulls, estimated to weigh close to 1500 pounds and carrying heavy horns in season, are the scouls of the herd. They are together critically and travel from one part of the feeding grounds to the other. The herd is thought to have shifted in recent years from the Blind slough district to the head of Big creek. Hunters have not molested them, and although cougar are said to be preying on the deer in that vicinity, they are not tacking the elk. Since the killings of a year ago in the coast district, poachers have not dared to operate so boldly among the elk. Loggers and woodmen in the district frequented by them occasionally come upon horns after the shedding season.

They're Good Mules, Said Dealer, Then One Let Loose

A mule is a mule, and it was proved Saturday at Cottage Grove. A. Larsen, who keeps a feed stable on the west side, down in the southern Lane metropolis, was showing a span of the patient, plodding but powerful animals to a prospective buyer. They were good mules, said the dealer. (All dealers say that.) To show how good they were, he had them step around a bit. One of the animals stepped with his hind foot, but backwards. The blow from the hoof felled the stable keeper, and for some time he was stunned. His head and right arm still hurt when he touched. How did the deal come out? Well, guess!

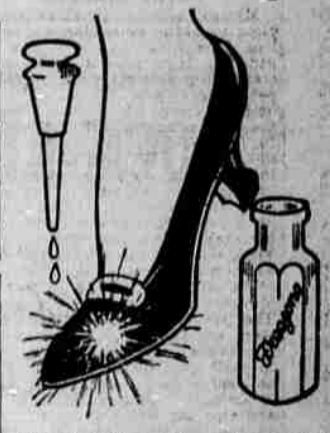

DR. LEACH IS SURPRISED

The Dalles, March 21.—The first public appearance of the Ku Klux Klan was made in The Dalles Sunday night, when, at the conclusion of the night services at the Methodist church, Rev. D. H. Leach, district superintendent, while greeting friends in the rear of the auditorium, was accosted by five men who introduced themselves as Klansmen. They commended the Rev. Mr. Leach upon his sermon and presented him with a check, the amount of which was not made known. Rev. Mr. Leach's sermon had been purely a doctrinal discussion, and had no bearing on the Klan, it was said. Organizers for the Klan have been here several weeks, but all their work has been carried on secretly. Many members are said to have been enrolled. Rev. D. H. Leach has his headquarters in Portland and he believes the Klansmen mistook him for the regular pastor of the local church. Tires, accessories and automobile repairing on all makes of cars. LEWIS WILL LEAVE OREGON GROWERS

Salem, March 22.—C. I. Lewis, who has been identified with the horticulture of Oregon for 16 years, has resigned as assistant general manager of the Oregon Growers Cooperative association effective May 1, and will take up new duties in Chicago. For 13 years Mr. Lewis was chief of the division of horticulture at the Oregon Agricultural college, and vice director of the experiment station. During his administration there it was generally recognized that one of the strongest departments of horticulture in the United States was built up at that institution. Mr. Lewis helped the Oregon Growers Cooperative association from the first day they started. During June and July, 1919, he toured the state in the interests of the Oregon growers. August 1, 1919 he was chosen organization manager and carried on the preliminary work and built the organization up to its present membership of 2000 and 32,000 acres. A year ago he was made assistant general manager of the organization. During the past year Mr. Lewis has had many offers but has finally accepted a position with the International Trade Press company of Chicago, who now controls the American Fruit Grower, the largest fruit paper in America. He will be managing editor of this publication.

LUMBER JAMMED UP N. Y. TOWN

Saranac Lake, N. Y.—The Adirondack lumber town of Tipper Lake was the scene of a record pile up of logs, when the sleds of a long log train being towed by a tractor got out of control on a hill and jammed. In the crush which followed, the logs burst the binding chains and several thousand feet of hardwood timber flooded over sidewalks and street to the depth of many feet. It took a crew of lumberjacks several hours to clear up the wreck, and again start the train on its way to the mills of the Oval Wood Dish company.
