Chicago.—Earl Kahlee owns an auto with a horn which sounds like a dull saw. He sounded it to pass a wagon pulled by two mules. The mules dropped dead, Kahlee affirms.

At the Cross Roads

Two roads stretch before you. It is for you to choose the one to travel.

One is a boulevard for a few miles, but beyond the pavement you know there are miles and miles where it is rutted, mirey and almost impassable. This road is called "Easy Spending."

The other road is rough at the beginning, but after the first few miles it stretches out into a beautiful highway. It is the road of "Thrift."

You are at the cross roads. Which way are you going to take?
