Lindsay, Tramp Poet, Is Coming October 28

Vachel Lindsay, America's "tramp poet" or "jazz poet," as he is sometimes called for lack of a more appropriate title, will be in Villard hall on October 28, to chant his world famous rhymes, according to word received today by Dean E. W. Allen of the Oregon Journal at the University of Oregon.

Robust American of medium stature, with blonde hair and ruddy complexion, and eyes that remind one of a green horizon, arched with eyebrows the shade of a nimbus cloud, is Vachel Lindsay, the renowned poet who will sing, shout or semaphore, if that means is necessary, to bring out the idea of his verse.

Hunting Deer

By CAPTAIN FRANK WINCH (Writer on outdoor life and famous as a big game hunter) This is the first of a series of 14 by Captain Winch. The first on Hunting Black Bear will be published next week.

Those of us who have spent many years in Nature's wild school of object teaching realize that a hunter of big game must develop a woods' sense. Accuracy with the rifle, while somewhat necessary is not nearly as essential as being able to find the game at which to shoot. This may require many seasons of apprenticeship, or it may not. Observation is vital. There are many telltale signs on every step, foot print, displaced leaves, frayed patches of birch bark, dewdrops dashed from the brushwood, browned twigs and ruffled moss tufts on the fallen cedars.

The slightest variation in the surface, the changes of the growth of timber, the qualities of the lying ground, the feeding ground, the hours of the day, the placement of the sun, and shifts of wind, these are but the index to the book of observation and woods' sense. To steal upon your prey with the craftiness of the cougar, quick functioning of hand, hand, eye and foot, the patience of hunter and thirst, the endurance of fatigue and indifference to heat and cold, these mark the line of demarcation from pros to expert.

Still hunting is the sportiest and most scientific way of hunting deer. It has its own charms, from the wilderness and solitude of the hunter into which it leads you, from the strange and almost mysterious skill which it requires and from the pride of conscious ability which one derives from tracking down a trail, by signs wholly invisible to unfamiliar eyes, to a successful and triumphant issue.

Look for deer tracks along the shores of ponds, in the bends of streams where the ground is marshy, along old wood roads and in open sloughs bordered by thickets. Where a deer track is made tonight you are apt to find another one there tomorrow. A rifle giving a velocity of around 2000 feet per second and a striking energy of over fifteen hundred foot pounds is about ideal.

Among the cartridges adapted to deer shooting are the following:

Table with columns: Caliber, Bullet, Muzzle Vel., Energy, Ft. lbs., 30 Win., 170, 2900, 1516; 32 Win., 200, 2050, 1807; 32 Win., Sp 170, 2104, 1672; 351 S. L., 180, 1850, 1378

A take-down rifle is more preferable to the solid frame, a repeater is the favorite.

Dressing a deer is a part of the game, and a vital part if you wish to save your game. Open up the abdominal cavity with the point of the knife, beginning where the ribs grow together and cut straight back, being careful not to pierce any of the intestines. Cut the membrane that separates the abdomen from the chest. Reach inside and sever the urinary organs and rectum. Turn the deer over on its side, feet pointing down hill, with a little urging the organs will slip out. Don't leave the deer on the ground; it will heat, get it over a log or across a rock so that the air can circulate underneath.

CONCERT SERIES TO START TOMORROW

The Methodist church choir is to open its year's work with a series of Sunday evening concerts beginning tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. This year John Stark Evans, choirmaster and organist, has gathered together a quartet of soloists who will appear in all of the concerts. Besides these Mr. Evans also promises an instrumental soloist in most of the concerts. The series is to be of several weeks' duration.

The quartet of soloists is made up of Madame Rose McGrew, dramatic soprano and instructor in the University school of music, Vera Price, contralto, for several years a soloist in the choir, Glen Morrow, baritone, men's glee club soloist, and Roy Bryson, tenor, member of the glee club.

Frank Radollet, flutist, will appear at the first concert. He, Rex Underwood, violinist, and Mr. Evans, organist, will be the instrumental soloists for the series. Mr. Radollet was former soloist of the Rivoli theatre orchestra in Portland. Mr. Underwood is head of the violin department of the University school of music and director of the University orchestra.

Mr. Evans' work as an organist should be known to all who have been on the campus before this year because of his former work in the church choir.

The program for tomorrow night is as follows: Anthem—Saviour, When Night Invades the Skies.....Shelley Glen Morrow and choir Solo—Lead Kindly Light.....Protheroe Roy Bryson, tenor Ocean Offertory—Meditation from Suite in B Minor.....Evans John Stark Evans Anthem—Fear Not Israel.....Buck Vera Price and choir Flute Solo—The Swan.....Saint-Saens Frank Radollet Solo—His Was Dearest.....Mauder Mme. McGrew
