Oats Smut

Use in the same proportion. Spray over the oats, using care to get it evenly and thoroughly mixed with the grain, by shoveling the grain over and over in the wagon box, or better still, on a tarpaulin floor. As soon as the proper quantity of solution has been distributed through the grain, shovel into a pile, cover with tarpaulin or sacks, and let stand overnight. Next morning they will be ready for seeding. The so-called "dry" method, of one pint formaldehyde to one quart of water is efficient, but the fumes are very disagreeable to the operators.

By the way, make sure that the seeder is clean of smut spores. Better spray or wash it with the solution the day before to make certain.

No man can afford to grow smutty oats. No man need do so.

HOW BANKER-FARMER EXCHANGE PLAN AIDS BETTER AGRICULTURE

Buyers and Sellers Brought Together by Field Experts Who Secure Square Deal for Both Parties; Quality of Farm Products Improved.

By D. H. OTIS,
Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association.

THE RAISING of first class cattle and the planting of pure-bred seeds take but little, if any, more time than inferior cattle and inferior seeds. With improved livestock and dependable seed the earnings of the farmer are sure to increase in volume and value.

That thought was the forerunner of the Banker-Farmer Exchange idea, a plan by which the banker might aid the farmer toward the possession of better cattle and the production of better crops and find a ready market for his surplus.

The Banker-Farmer Exchange plan was proposed in 1919 by the Agricultural Committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, of which the chairman was Burton M. Smith, now chairman of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association. To get it started, bankers of Wisconsin subscribed to a guarantee fund of $10,000, covering a period of two years.

After three years of operation, during which time there has been opportunity to give the plan a thorough test, the Exchange has been found to be an actual and a distinct help to farmers, and, incidentally, to the banks of farming communities.

How the Exchange Works

The idea is worked out as follows:

Any farmer in the state who has any grade or pure-bred livestock for sale can step into the bank where he does his banking business, and, on blanks furnished to the bank, can list what he has to offer, giving the number, age, color, records, price, etc. Any farmer, on the other hand, who wishes to purchase a horse or a cow, or even a carload of stock, can notify his banker of the kind and number of stock he wishes. These listings are sent to a central office, where the prospective purchaser is put in touch with the listings of stock for sale that come nearest to meeting his requirements, and which are situated as close as possible to his locality.

With the development of the work of the Exchange, we found that there was a large number of inquiries coming in for carload lots of improved dairy cattle. In order to handle these buyers efficiently, it was necessary to secure reliable field men. This was done by getting in touch with local banks and having the banker recommend a reliable man who was a good judge of stock, who was well acquainted with the farmers and commanded their respect, and who was in a position to meet buyers with his automobile and take them from farm to farm, show them the stock that was for sale, and, when found satisfactory by the buyer, help in assembling, testing and shipping.

The Services of Field Men

These field men are expected to keep posted on the livestock for sale in their respective communities. They are to steer the buyers away from herds that are known to be affected with tuberculosis, or that have contagious abortion. In other words, these field men are expected to give a square deal to both the seller and the buyer. For the services rendered by the Banker-Farmer Exchange, including the services of the field man and his automobile, the buyer pays a 5 per cent commission. This commission is divided equally with the local field man.

During 1922, the Exchange experienced a marked growth. It had inquiries for over 12,000 head of dairy cattle, an increase of 50 per cent over the preceding year. The records show 58 carloads sold, as compared with 23 carloads in 1921. Of these, nine carloads went to the state of Maryland, eight to Illinois, four each to Ohio and Minnesota, three each to Iowa, North Dakota and Missouri, two each to Montana, South Dakota, Florida, Mississippi and Canada, and one each to Washington, Michigan, Indiana, Georgia, New York and Kansas. The balance were sold to parties in Wisconsin.

Sales Greatly Increased

The value of the livestock sold during the year amounted to $115,575, as compared with $37,092 in 1921. The business transacted during the year showed an increase of over 165 per cent.

An encouraging feature of the work is found in the repeat orders. Buyers seem to be pleased with the service they have received and are not only coming back themselves, but are referring others to the Exchange.

Another encouraging feature of the work is the increased interest that is developing in the state. Parties are writing the Exchange for bulls with records and of certain lines of breeding, and are also writing for cows and heifers of foundation stock. With the development of this type of work, the Banker-Farmer Exchange will be of material assistance in developing and improving the livestock of the state.

FARMHAND KILLS TWO AND SELF IN QUARREL

Laoli, Cal., April 12.—Three persons are dead here today as the result of Joe Metti, a farm hand running amuck. S. M. Joslin, owner of a vineyard, Mrs. E. V. Mourier, and Metti are the victims. Joslin and Metti quarreled at breakfast this morning, according to Herman Becker, ranch employee.

Hearing shots, Becker and another man rushed to the house. They found Joslin lying in the doorway with two holes through his body. Mrs. Mourier had evidently tried to escape and was shot through the back, her body being partly under a bed.

Lying beside some oil barrels in the yard, the body of Metti was found, the top of his head blown away by a charge of shot.

The shotgun with which the triple tragedy had been enacted was clutched in his arms.

Fire On Jap Freighter Is Now Under Control
