DOES THE HOUSE SHAPE THE MAN?

It has been contended that a man's dog affords an excellent key to his character. Despite the biting nature of "Sartor Resartus," clothes are still accepted as an index to temperament, condition and habits of the wearer.

FOOLS AND CROSSINGS

According to a survey of motorists' conduct at grade crossings made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, 97 per cent of all motorists exercise precaution when approaching tracks.

There were practically no accidents to motor buses. This is because the law in most states requires such vehicles, as well as street cars, to stop before crossing railroad tracks.

Here is the Wall Street view of present business and financial conditions as voiced in the Clews' weekly financial letter, which probably expressed the general opinion in speculative circles.

For some weeks past, since the general prevalence of active business has been so clearly demonstrated that even professional pessimists could not doubt, discussion has turned to the question whether business activity would continue for a long time on the present basis.

The Portland papers announce that the S. P. & S. railroad system, which owns the Oregon Electric, among other lines, will spend $13,000,000 in improvements and betterments.

Some state newspapers are criticizing Governor Dixon because he is still talking about light taxes and huge state indebtedness.

Forest protection work, which has been going on for several months, is making good progress.

French must feel as thoroughly satisfied with the situation as the English were when the Irish factions started in to exterminate each other.

Prohibition Commissioner Haynes announces one day that the country is becoming Sahara dry, and the next attributes the theft of his automobile to bootleggers.

There is said to be a plan on foot among politicians to shelve Calvin Coolidge. That was popularly supposed to have happened when he was tagged as vice-president.

Automobiles killed 14,000 people and maimed tens of thousands of others in this country last year. Why not prohibit their manufacture?

A French novelist has published a long treatise to prove woman's taste superior to man's, but you could prove it by some of the partners they pick.

Officially it is stated the number of hoose in the country is increasing. That may explain the ever-soaring cost of living.

The Arkansas supreme court has affirmed that the paid girl can be kept out of the schoolroom, as is that kind which has much to learn.

It is quite evident that William Jennings Bryan possesses an abiding faith in everything except hair restorers.

The optimist is a person who thinks the government will do something to lower the price of sugar.

Inky Thinks
A war isn't really over until all the allies have fallen out.

Inky Thinks
Almost any system of government will work if the people will.

Inky Thinks
A man isn't old until he begins to wonder dismally what the world is coming to.

Inky Thinks
The difference between an empire and an empire is that an empire thinks it is an empire.

Inky Thinks
Europe's leisure class lived on the taxes, and no one but holders are in a fair way to become aristocrats.
