Waited Till the Cows Came Home

"I am indeed glad to write you this letter. I was a terrible sufferer from gasness in the stomach and colic attacks. The specialist, our family doctor sent me to Philadelphia, gave me no relief, although I took his medicine till the cows came home. He finally said I would have to be operated. Luckily, I heard of Mayrs Wonderful Remedy then, and although it is now three years since I took a course of it, I have never had a symptom of my old trouble since." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

When Carters left their furnished flat their bank account was low. To fit a place up, seemed to them, would take a year or so. But Mrs. Carter said, "Of course we'll just trade off our car. We'll SWAP it for some things we need—
How handy SWAP-ADS are!"

HARRISBURG BRIDGE ISSUE RISES AGAIN

No action was taken by the Lane county court today regarding proposed construction of a new bridge over the Willamette at Harrisburg, for which the Lane county court signed an election order yesterday. Should Lane vote to build, Lane and the state will each come in for one-third the total cost, it is expected. The bridge is a necessity, in the opinion of many officials, and Lane's expense could be taken care of without voting bonds, it is believed.

W. H. Malone of Corvallis and William Doby of Baker, state highway commissioners, and Roy A. Klein, state highway engineer, were here last night and part of this morning to talk with the county court regarding such a construction project and also to view state work in this part of the county. They did not get over the outlying sections as planned, according to Commissioner Roney, because they feared weather conditions.

It is believed the Harrisburg bridge would cost $225,000.

COAL

World output which made its highest record in 1913 is again nearing pre-war production. United States supplies between one-third and one-half of world's output. Our underground coal supply is more than half that of the entire world.

The story of world coal production and the share supplied by the United States is told in some figures compiled by the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York. The tabulation shows that the world's coal output which stood at 1,414,600,000 short tons in 1910, the earliest official figures, had advanced to 1,478,000,000 in 1913, the year preceding the war, then dropped to 1,170,000,000 in 1915, slowly advancing to 1,306,000,000 in 1918, the closing year of the war, and stood at approximately 1,332,000,000 short tons in 1922.

Accepting unofficial figures of production for earlier years, the total world output grew from 12,000,000 short tons in 1800 to 80,000,000 short tons in 1850, 800,000,000 in 1900, 1,478,000,000 in 1913, and 1,332,000,000 in 1922. Meantime our own production grew from 20 long tons in 1814 to 6,000,000 in 1850, 240,000,000 in 1900, and 608,000,000 in the high record year 1918, dropping to 411,000,000 in 1922, the lowest record since 1908.

The share which the United States supplied of world output in the years immediately preceding the war averaged 38 per cent, advancing to about 47 per cent, in the closing year of the war, then dropping to 40 per cent, in 1920, and but little more than 35 per cent, in the year 1922, in which our production was the smallest since 1908.

The United States, despite the abnormally low production of 1922, still far outranks the other coal producing countries of the world. According to the Geological Survey the 1922 output of the half dozen biggest coal producing countries of the world, stated in metric tons, was United States, 417,000,000; Great Britain, 256,000,000; Germany, 141,000,000 of coal and 137,000,000 of lignite; France, 32,000,000; Japan, 25,000,000; Poland, 24,000,000; and Belgium 21,000,000. The United States has been constantly since 1900 the world's largest producer of coal.

It is quite natural, adds the Trade Record, that we should not only head the list of coal producing nations but that we supply a normal years from one-third to nearly one-half of the world's output, which met in Canada just before the war with the special purpose of discussing the coal reserves of the various parts of the globe came to the conclusion that the United States had slightly more than one-half of the world's known "coal reserve," estimating our own underground coal supply at 384,000,000 metric tons, against 124,000,000 in Canada, 996,000,000 in China, 403,000,000 in Germany, as it then existed, and 190,000,000 in Great Britain.

These figures suggest that the United States alone would be able to meet the coal requirements both at home and abroad for a very long period, since the Geological Survey estimates that 14,000,000,000 tons which we have turned out in the 110 years since our coal mining began formed only about one per cent of the original supply, and that approximately per cent of this vast and valuable reserve still awaits the call of coal consuming world.
