TIRE WIDTH STATUTE EXPLAINED BY KOZER

In response to a recent letter addressed to the secretary of state by the Walters-Lark Lumber company of this city regarding a question of paying additional license fees by truck owners where it was found necessary that said owners increase the width of tires on their vehicles in order to make it possible for them to operate profitably during the winter season on roads and comply with the recent order of the county court, limiting the weight to 350 pounds per tire, a letter has today been received by the above company from the secretary of state as follows:

"Responding to your communication of a few days ago, relative to tire widths where additional tire width is supplied for traction, purposes only, included are several blanks which have been provided for the convenience of truck owners wishing to avail themselves of that provision of section 25 of the motor vehicle law, which permits the using of oversized tires upon trucks not exceeding ten tons capacity, for the purpose of securing traction and not for the purpose of increasing the combined weight and load capacity.

"If you will submit the facts in accordance with the blanks and the provisions of the law, referred to, the matter of granting the permit will receive consideration."

The law as set forth in laws of 1921, special session, chapter 8, section 3, governing these motor vehicles reads as follows:

"The secretary of state may in his discretion grant a permit to use oversize tires on motor trucks not exceeding two tons capacity, for the purpose of securing traction and not for the purpose of increasing the combined weight and load capacity and no charge in excess of the regular license and tire width fees provided for regular equipment shall be made."

It will therefore be necessary for those wishing to increase the width of tires on light trucks and not pay additional license fees to secure the necessary application papers, covering the change in equipment, from the secretary of state and fill out the same in accordance with the instructions printed on the same, it is announced.

SCHOOL CHILDREN DONATE GIFTS FOR COMMUNITY'S POOR

School children of Eugene have been the biggest contributors to the supply of funds and wares for the Christmas baskets of the poor of the city, according to Mrs. M. S. Ady, who has charge of the work here.

Every school has done its share, Mrs. Ady reports, and the students have shown a wonderful spirit in their giving. One little girl was asked what she wanted for Christmas, and her reply was: "Oh, give me money, and then I can give it to the needy folks."

The money received for the purchase of supplies was received from the school children. The University of Oregon students donated $100, and the high schools and grades have also given. The next largest single contribution was a $25 grocery credit by the Ku Klux Klan.

Girls Do Good Work. The Camp Fire Girls, the Girl Reserves, and the Girl Scouts have been efficient and capable aides in the work, Mrs. Ady says. All the youngsters, boys and girls, have done their share.

The senior houses of the University of Oregon have cooperated in every way with the work too.

"Every senior house on the campus helped," said Mrs. Ady today. "They worked efficiently, too. They asked first what was needed, and then they made or gave that."

"I think there are going to be some mighty fine Christmases for everybody this year."

The latest contributions were from the Daughters of the Nile and the Kozy Koper Klub, together with a number of individual donations.

GIANT LINER IS BEACHED IN FOG AT ROBBIN REEF

In the effort to get her clear, tugs were pushing against the bow and on the side, while others had lines pulling on the stern. Sumner tugs were gathering to offer assistance.

It was apparent that she had struck first on her port bow. A ferryboat captain said that she seemed to take a sudden sheer before she struck. Sumner opinions were advanced as to the cause.

Some believed that the tide might have been responsible while others advanced the opinion that the pilot got off the course in the fog and went into the shallow water.

When she struck up the bay the fog was so heavy that only the tops of her stacks were visible from the shore.

Regard Affair As Joke. Passengers, who had been making preparations for disembarkation regarded the affair as a joke. A tug was started on its deck. Meanwhile customs officials commenced examining baggage aboard, so that some of the more fortunate could be taken ashore in tugs.

There was a rush for the wireless room as hundreds of those aboard had train reservations which they desired to cancel.

Others wanted to send messages to friends and relatives to inform them that their Christmas arrival home would be delayed.

The ship's staff began serving luncheon and making preparations to serve dinner.

The shores of the bay were plainly visible from the Leviathan's decks, as were the clustering skyscrapers of Manhattan, "so near and yet so far."

Await Night's Tide. Eighteen tugs were standing by, puffing valiantly in their efforts to pull the big liner off the mud flat. It appeared that the Leviathan would remain hard and fast ashore until the tide approached the flood, about 6 p. m.

Captain Herbert Hartley said it would be impossible for him to make a statement until he had reported to headquarters. The pilot, Joseph Bigley, explained that it was a strong ebb from Kell Von Kull that was responsible. It caught the ship on the port side and before the drift could be controlled she was aground. There was 41 feet of water astern and 25 feet on the bow.

Was Avoiding Traffic. Pilot Bigley said he was trying to avoid the harbor traffic in the moderate fog by keeping to the left. He thought the water there would be deep enough for clearance.

The tug Manonice went aground less than 10 feet from the bow where the Leviathan hit the mud bank.

The passengers had expected to land at 11 a. m. Many were disappointed when they realized they were "hung up" down the bay, but most of them regarded it as a huge joke.

Remove Passengers. Shortly after 2 p. m. the ferryboat Fremont started taking the Leviathan's first-class passengers ashore. The ferry maneuvered her way along side the giant liner, which at that time was listing to starboard as her churning propellers, under the efforts of a dozen tugs, failed to move her from the mud.

The tug's withdrawal at the time resulted in lowering of the vessel's stern, but her prow remained stuck in the mud. The port side water line was above water by mid afternoon.

The ferry took passengers from the starboard side. There was confusion as many were brought aboard the ferry.
