DEPUTIES TURN DOWN MOTION ON PLAN OF DAWES

In two letters, had reminded the French and Belgians of the declaration they had made when they entered the Ruhr, that they had done so merely to enforce payment by the Germans.

And the German delegates at London, through the British prime minister, had made it plain that the Reichstag would not accept the proposed plan unless the Ruhr were evacuated.

Nevertheless, M. Herriot went on, he had come before the cabinet in Paris "decided to limit to a maximum of one year the military occupation of the Ruhr."

"To go beyond this was to risk again a rupture of the conference," the premier added, "and he became convinced that if France remained in the Ruhr except for a definite stay she would stay there absolutely alone."

The advantages he had obtained at the London conference, the premier insisted, do not strike the imagination, but they are substantial advantages.

"They will appear considerable to all who believe with the experts, that default and penalties must be avoided as much as possible and that the reparations problem must be solved peacefully and righteously."

He said the French delegation had done its utmost in London to bring forward the problem of inter-allied debts, but it had found it impossible to graft this question on the question of the execution of the Dawes plan.

This, however, he added, would be discussed at another conference.

Great enthusiasm was displayed when M. Herriot declared that the application of the Dawes plan would dissipate the war spirit, and when he told of France's horror at the thought of war.

The premier also was applauded when he said he could not refuse the Dawes plan, which was based on extension and when he emphasized the importance of arbitration.

He was interrupted by the communists, who cried, "Down with war," and "Long live peace."

These interruptions were frequent but the premier's supporters gave him rousing cheers when he told of the method which had been adopted for determining when Germany was in default. The method, he said, was entirely in accordance with the treaty of Versailles.

A violent display by the communists forced Paul Painleve, president of the chamber, to discontinue the sitting after the premier had finished his statement. M. Marty's language had been so unrestrained that M. Painleve had at various times warned him, but when he finally produced the communists' amnesty poster and waited it from the rostrum, M. Painleve put on his hat, signifying the session was at an end.

The communist deputy then started to scale the secretary's desk and to occupy the speaker's empty chair, but the ushers prevented this move in time and hastily evacuated the chamber. In the galleries while the extreme radicals kept on crying, "Amnesty."

The phrase which made M. Painleve suspend the sitting was Marty's shout of declaration: "All the ministers are filthy scoundrels."

GERMANS ACTING
BRUSSELS, Aug. 21.—The German government has begun the legislative program required to carry out the agreement reached at the London conference for launching the Dawes reparations plan.

A bill presented to the Reichstag provides, first, assent to the London protocol; second, authorization for the minister of finance to float a loan of 800,000,000 marks; and, third, authorization for the government of the Reich to take measures with a view to the surrender of state railway bonds to the value of 11,000,000,000 marks and bonds to the value of 5,000,000,000 marks under the law relating to taxation of industry.

DEGREE FOR BELGIUM
BRUSSELS, Aug. 21.—A decree was issued today in closing the parliamentary session, following the cabinet's complete approval of the statement on the outcome of the London reparations conference as made by Premier Theunis and the foreign minister, Hymans.

These statements brought out that the financial pledges obtained in exchange for the evacuation of the Ruhr represent 10,000,000,000 of gold marks in railroad and industrial bonds, while a guarantee is afforded because Germany cannot violate her new engagements without ruining her credit in America as well as in Europe.
