

ORPHANAGE WORK IS ALL DONE BY HOMELESS WAIFS

ALEXANDROPOL, Armenia, Nov. 21.—Far out on the broad, barren plateau which divides Russia from Turkey and Persia a small group of American men and women are conducting the largest and most unique orphanage in the world. In their care and under their leadership are 18,000 Armenian boys and girls who have been salvaged from the wreckage of war and ruin in the Mikho. They are kept alive by the nickle and dime of American charity and by contributions of food and clothing from the American people.

Five thousand of the orphans are boys from two to seven years of age. These are in charge of Miss Janet McKay, of Buffalo, N. Y., who is called by the natives "the Mother of Armenia." Miss McKay looks after the great family of adopted children with all the care, solicitude and affection of an American mother. Nothing will persuade some of the smaller children that she is not their real mother.

Didn't Have Toys

Most of the orphans lost one or both parents during the Great War, so that they scarcely know what it is to have a real parent. Nor did they know what childhood was until the Americans supplied them with toys, games, pictures, taught them the spirit of play, and made it possible for them to romp and frolic on the broad fields of their native country. To see great masses of them at play, in their immaculate garments of white, their clean, bronzed, happy faces, is a sight that cannot fail to affect the American visitor's pride and emotion.

Before the Americans came to Armenia 80 per cent of these children were affected with trachoma, conjunctivitis and other eye diseases. All were suffering acutely from the effects of inanition and exposure. The death-rate was about 50 a day. Young physicians from the United States army and American nurses took the children in hand and brought them back to health and happiness. Today the death-rate is about one every three months.

When the correspondent visited Alexandropol this vast multitude of children assembled on a great campus and formed in gigantic human letters, the words "America, We Thank You," as an expression of their gratitude for the help they received from the adults and children of the United States. Viewed from the great stone military barracks which surround the campus, the scene was inspiring and touching. The Bolshevik authorities refuse to allow the children to have American flags so the orphans carried instead great white towels bearing the stamp "Medical Department, United States Army." These they waved enthusiastically, crying, "Long Live the United States; Long Live the American People."

Orphans Do Work

The entire work of cooking, sewing, washing and bedmaking at the orphanage is done by the orphans themselves. The American personnel numbers less than 25, a remarkable fact when it is considered that there is a whole city of children to look after.

Armenia is yet too poor to support these children, although some steps are being taken to this end, so that the Americans will continue to care for them till means are found of placing them with families or finding employment for them in the country. From the age of five the orphans are taught sewing, embroidery, basket-making, woodworking, dressmaking and other useful arts. The older children are instructed in the mechanical arts, in farming, dairying and cattle-raising.

Scrub Brush Takes On New Role; Used As Flesh Reducer

VIENNA, Nov. 21.—The scrub brush has been introduced in Vienna in a new role—that of flesh reducer. The idea was brought here by a South American doctor and has made a considerable rub in overweight circles.

The scrubbing treatment with a perfectly dry brush, a trifle softer than the kitchen variety, must be taken four or five times a day. The more the better. Every part of the body must be massaged and as much pressure as possible applied to make the work of the bristles effective.

After the rubbing, a cold or tepid shower or plunge should be taken. If these directions are carried out, the enthusiasts say, a pound or so of "excess" disappears like magic every week.

Cheese Factory Moves Quarters

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 21.—(Special)—A cheese factory has recently been opened in the Elite building at Springfield, having moved there from its former location in West Springfield. The McKenzie River Cheese factory as it is known is owned and operated by John Schmid, an expert cheese maker. He has been experimenting with several kinds of cheese besides the standard makes and has built up a considerable business in California.

The factory will make Swiss, French, Limberger and Pimento cheese for both the wholesale and retail trade. The store will also handle milk, buttermilk and butter.

WINTER TO BEGIN MONTH FROM TODAY

Eugene is assured of at least one more month of balmy weather. The equinoctial storms which mark the beginning of the winter season, is December 22, according to astronomers and weather statisticians.

A warm downpour of rain started early this morning, bringing the total precipitation for the 24-hour period up to 7.30 this morning to one-half inch. Heavy rains have been falling on the water shed at Oakridge, apparently, for the Willamette river rose from 7 1-2 feet to 9 1-2 feet yesterday afternoon, and dropped to 8.5 feet this morning.

Weather has been correspondingly warm. With a drop of two degrees in the minimum record, temperature was like spring, at 47 degrees. The weather forecast is for more rain.

He laughed at Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Now read this letter of thanks from Mr. Kane. It speaks for itself. Remember, it is because Kellogg's is ALL BRAN that it was so effective in his case—just as it has been in thousands of others. Only ALL BRAN can produce 100 per cent results.

My dear friend:

Imagine a young man weighing 163 pounds in the course of a few months passed in bed, a weakling weighing 44 pounds. An elderly lady whom I knew since I was a kid paid me what she thought was a last visit. Upon being told of my plight she immediately mentioned your product for such an ailment. Maybe some of us didn't look upon her views very lightly . . . it was to laugh!

My dear friend, I am still laughing not at your product, but because I am able to. I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Krumbled Bran!" It should be called "Constipation's worst enemy." I owe you my heartfelt gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is always full of bran—Kellogg's Krumbled. Wishing you countless days of progress, I am

Yours for success,

John M. Kane,

Those inside at that time, however, will be waited on before the present vote scale is closed forever.
