FRIDAY, JANUARY 9.

For the Rugh Traffic Rules

Sentiment in the city council is apparently still divided on the question of the abolition of angle parking of automobiles, although there is an apparent majority in favor of abolition.

One of the peculiarities accompanying the question of automobile traffic regulation in all cities is that there is never agreement among the regulators as to just what ought to be done and how. The questions are usually decided by narrow majority or by individual official order.

It may as well be agreed, then, that concord as to traffic regulations on all points is unlikely in so large a body as our city council. The question must be passed up or down to a more centralized authority.

Chairman Ramey Rugh, of the street committee, has given careful study to the traffic problem since his election last November, and has formulated definite ideas and recommendations as to what ought to be done.

He believes that angle parking should be abolished and that the parking time-limit in the congested district should be lengthened to 40 minutes or perhaps an hour.

Help From an Enemy Source

The New York World, which recently deserted the cause of the federal child labor amendment after having been one of its most able advocates, finds it pretty hard to keep in the new path it has marked out for itself.

Some opposition to the proposed Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution is being voiced hereabouts on the ground that it would be a step toward Sovietism and the nationalization of children.

This is absurd. It is such an argument is good against Federal legislation on the subject it must be equally good against State legislation in regulation of child labor.

The World goes on then to say that it opposes the amendment, but because of its federal and not its substantive character. It believes child labor regulation should be left to the states.

The fallacy of the argument which The World so thoroughly explodes is of a piece with the other false charge being broadcast by opponents of the amendment that its sponsors are communists and radicals.

Threat was made in the recent campaign that if the state income tax law was repealed, a more drastic one would be brought forth to succeed it.

On the farms of the United States at present there are 475,000,000 chickens of the aggregate value of $350,000,000. Last year they laid eggs of the value of $600,000,000.

Do not visit or spend money in the state of orange groves and jails," reads a sticker being plastered over the whole United States by the I. W. W., who are boycotting California because of its anti-syndicalism laws.

The Portland ministerial association has decided to invite Billy Sunday to hold a revival meeting there, but not by the unanimous vote that Sunday used to make a condition pre-requisite to his going to a city to preach.

COMMENT OF THE PRESS

The Mills' Plan. (Salem Capital Journal) A. L. Mills, of Portland, president of the First National bank, former speaker of the house of representatives, and president of the direct primary league which gave Oregon the present primary law, sponsors a proposal to the legislature to refer to the people by resolution, a constitutional amendment for revision of the primary law providing a post-primary party convention.

Retention of the principal features of the present primary law is provided, with a proviso that a candidate to receive the nomination of his party must receive at least 40 per cent of the votes cast for the nomination. If the candidates fail to secure the requisite vote in the primary, the party stayed the democratic party and demoralized the republican party in Oregon while fostering the group and bloc conventions of malcontents. While it has increased the quantity of candidates, it has deteriorated their quality, put a premium upon irresponsible self-starters and fostered demagoguery. It has not increased the popular vote, but rather decreased it. It has abolished party responsibility and discipline, leaving nothing but the name.

We elect a legislature of 90 members, on 90 different platforms, each of them committed to his own hobby. Our state officers likewise make their own platforms. Consequently efforts at reform are abortive and taxes multiply through lack of an official program and absence of uniform party pledges and discipline.

Having tried the direct primary system and found it wanting—it is not being the election of mediocrities and demagogues, and a progressive increase in taxation, there is no reason why we should not try a modified convention system, at least until it is an advisory capacity. The self-starters would be free to run against the party nominees, if they desired to.

With Good Intentions? (Grants Pass Courier) In 1923 Governor Pierce stated that the Redwood highway would be paved in five years. The governor probably forgot to add "with good intentions."

Cross-Word Study. (Corvallis Gazette-Times) It has come. A few weeks ago we expressed surprise that some public school had not put in a course in cross-word puzzles. Now comes news from Baltimore that the Western high school is using cross-word puzzles in teaching French and Latin.

In Lighter Vein Not Yet in the Mode. (Minneapolis Journal) We have seen "Ye Tea Shoppe" and "Ye Olde Booke Shoppe" come in, but we hardly look for "Ye Iron Shoppe" or "Ye Steele and Machine Shoppe."

Puffing Up Prexy. (Minneapolis Journal) An Indiana college has placed its president in a $75,000 home and he is feeling as important as the coach.

Sure Sign (Life) "Well," said the disgruntled bell-boy as he looked at the nickel tip, "he's not bluffing—he's a real millionaire, all right."

Time for Prayer (Princeton Tiger) The customs officer eyed the bottle suspiciously. "It's only ammonia," stammered the returning passenger. "Oh, is it?" said the customs officer, taking a long swallow. It was.

Good Worker (Punch) Husband—"Telling lies is not one of my failings." Wife—"No, dear, it's one of your few successes."

Attracted by the bright lights of the city hands of range horses descended on Baker last week and the pounding on his little knees in a moment picking them up one at a time. "Oh, Muvver!" he rejoiced, in a very injured tone of voice.

"Mother is very sorry, dear," I pleaded apologetically. "I forgot they were in my lap."

"When we reached the apartment I had to find a tiny vase and let Kent arrange the grasses in it carefully."

"Mother will buy Kent some pretty flowers," I suggested tactlessly. "Don't you think they are pretty, Muvver?" he asked, looking up into my face with disappointed big brown eyes.

"When Kent came home at dinner-time he discovered the little vase of grasses standing on the window-sill where Kent Jr. had left them."

"Hello! What's this?" he asked, picking it up curiously. "Those are Kent's flowers, dear," I explained, and then I went on to tell him all about the incident.

"Bless his little heart," Kent said, looking in his eyes. "Do you know, Mother, I wonder if it's fair to the boy to keep him here in the city? Lately I've been wondering whether we ought not to buy a little cottage some place out of town."

"Why, Kent?" I exclaimed, going over to him eagerly. "It's the very thing I have been dreaming of for a long time."

"All right, Babbs. Let's buy a little white cottage somewhere with lots of grounds and fresh air, and just hundreds and hundreds of grasses and all kinds of flowers for Kent to pick."

"Oh, Kent, if we only could," I whispered, my arms around his neck. Tomorrow—Somewhere—A Little White Cottage

Mr. Clanton looks Over Testimony of Dr. Ross at Salem

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 9.—R. E. Clanton, former state master fish warden and superintendent of hatcheries in Salem, perusing testimony that was submitted at the hearing given Dr. Thomas Ross some time ago following the attempt by Governor Pierce to oust Ross as a member of the fish commission.

Ross, in his testimony, assailed Clanton, declaring that waste of funds which he formerly had attributed to Clanton said that later he expects to issue a statement refuting Ross' testimony.

"I was with the commission for 15 years," said Clanton, "under some of the best commissioners the state has ever had, and I am going to protect my reputation."

The governor has not yet announced his decision as to whether he will remove Ross. When first notified by the governor that he had been removed Ross refused to quit without a hearing, and at the conclusion of the hearing the governor took the case under advisement.

Woman is Charged With Receiving Loot

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 9.—Nellie Wright of Des Moines, Iowa, was on trial before a jury in criminal court probably Monday on the charge of receiving the bank loot of her husband, William Wright, slain robber. It was announced here by District Attorney Robert Marr, who said reports that the case against her would be dismissed were erroneous.

One of the alienists who examined the girl yesterday reported her sane and the district attorney said he would reduce her bond from $15,000 to $5000 if anyone offered to provide that.

Cotton growers, cheer up, science says the boll weevil can be conquered. Insects attract your boll weevil by the aroma of the food that he likes, then destroy him.

They kill tigers and leopards by sound. The beating of a tethered kid attracts them, and a bullet does the rest.

The old factory bait for the boll weevil is being perfected by chemists. It will be prepared synthetically. The mother boll weevil will follow her nose, and die, of poison with her eggs unborn. And this, mind you, is serious. Once find how to attract the insect pest, by smell, and they are done for.

It has been proved that insects, moths, for instance, have a sense of smell of incredibly wide range, far exceeding in keenness that of any bloodhound.

Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, great and wise British surgeon, warns women that the craze for a silhouette figure is a menace to the race.

Wearing rubber corsets and starving to get a boyish figure, which nature never planned for women, is a crime.

Sir William is wrong when he says, "Women are much more monkey-like than men, and show it in imitations." He is right in denouncing the abnormal craze for skininess.

CHRONIC COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic cough and persistent cold lead to serious lung trouble. You must stop them now with Creomulsion, a milk emulsion of cod liver oil. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds. Other forms of throat and lung trouble, Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic cough and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrh, bronchitis and other forms of the lung and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds, the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist, Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)
