LOCAL PEOPLE TO SPEAK ON THRIFT AT 4-L MEETING

"A penny saved is a penny earned." The foregoing advice of Benjamin Franklin, whose birthday, January 17, marks the beginning of annual Thrift week, to be observed in Eugene, will also be the text of an address by Claude D. Rorer, president of the Bank of Commerce, at a meeting of Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen at Wendling Friday night. His subject will be "Benjamin Franklin and Thrift."

Mrs. Anne Landsbury Rock of the University of Oregon will speak on the household budget at the same meeting. More than 200 persons have obtained tickets for the meeting, it is announced, and the addresses will follow a big supper being put on by the 4-L club.

Plans are being laid for observance of Thrift week in the city schools according to Joseph Glenn, chairman of the committee to conduct the essay contest in which school children will have opportunity of winning cash prizes. Talks before schools, service clubs, visits of school children to banks to become familiar with processes of modern banking, will be part of the program.

The message of frugality carried by speakers picked for their ability to implant the need of thrift in the minds of the children, will be carried on in schools, churches and assembly halls, so that citizens may realize afresh that the only way to prosperity and independent old age is adopting the rule of spending less than one earns.

Saturday has been designated as "Pay Your Bills Day," for which L. D. Pierce has been named chairman. Other days and chairmen are as follows: Sunday, January 18, "Share With Others Day," Frank Eberhart; Monday, January 19, "Thrift or Bank Day," L. Lombard; Tuesday, January 20, "Life Insurance Day," George N. McLean; Wednesday, January 21, "Own Your Home Day," W. B. Cooper; Thursday, January 22, "Budget Day," Lillian Tingle; Friday, January 23, "Safe Investment Day," Fred G. Stickle.

UPTON CLOSE HAS MESSAGE, GIVEN BEFORE ASSEMBLY

"The center of the world is the Pacific basin, and Oregon, California and Washington are the doors of America today. It falls on the Pacific coast to take the lead in bringing about a mutual understanding, between this half and the other half of the earth."

So spoke Upton Close, author-adventurer, under his true name of Josef Washington Hall, at the weekly assembly of the University of Oregon student body today. His subject was "Adventures in Chinese Revolutions," wherein, a resume of his recent experiences in the heart of "The Yellow Fang in Pacific Asia," was told.

"My duty in China was of completing the discovery of the other half of the human race—eastern Asia, and so finish the duties of Marco Polo," he said. "The 'Far East' is only the Near East, insofar as the Pacific coast is concerned, and the Near East is getting 'Nearer' day by day." He continued.

Good Will Trampled.

"Japan's good will was trampled on when we passed the immigration act in July. Congress didn't deal with Japan—it dealt with Mr. Hughes and the state department.

"War started in China by September, and in one sense, America's attitude toward Japan, started that war. Japan had made preparations to give up the view of furthering her connections with the United States.

"The row between the legislative and state departments of our own government resulted in a rough deal for Japan. The situation could have been handled differently, and without affronting the Japanese in the rudemannered way of America."

Japan Handicapped.

Mr. Hall said that Japan is a first class power operating on a third class supply of resources. She has no steel, iron or copper of her own, and without these essentials, can never become an international power.

The status of the East Asiatic situation today, in the opinion of Mr. Hall, is that Russia, China and Japan are coming together in nearly all of their combined social, industrial and political elements, and "we have the beginning of an inevitable coalition between the three powers."

"Nothing can stop it," Mr. Hall concluded, "and our only hope is that the combination will bring about the development of a cultured and charming Pacific Asia—the bed of a new civilization."
