at each culprit, and bade him remember his lesson. "I could charge you $2 for this," said Hinzoner, "but because the new traffic signs have not been erected, I am going to let you off. But be careful. Any one of you who comes into my court a second time for this offense will get the fine." Judge Gilmore explicitly points out that as soon as sufficient publicity is given this action, all violators of the new ordinance may expect the minimum fine for the first offense.

Hoboes Kept Active—These are perilous days in Eugene for unworthy hoboes caught in the act of begging on the streets for a meal. The police department is promptly jailing them, and after a hearty meal and a visit to Judge Gilmore in city court the next morning the mendicants are introduced to the woodpile at the street department's yard. Yesterday John Macey, police captain, attempted to get two of the men to work, and they flatly refused. "All right," said the officer, "no work, no food," and he placed our prisoners on a reducing diet of bread and water. Last night Tom Owens, William Rogers and Charles Gibson were found sleeping in the Mathews barn. They pleaded not guilty to vagrancy when given a hearing in city court, and were to be tried this afternoon. Police expect a busy weekend, and are promising C. D. Farmer, street commissioner, a large group of day laborers Monday morning.

Barograph Installed—Eugene can now do its own weather forecasting. A barograph, the chief instrument used in weather forecasting, has been donated by Professor and Mrs. Sam Bass Warner, and is in operation at present in the office of Dr. Warren D. Smith on the University of Oregon campus. Portland newspapers, it is pointed out, depend upon San Francisco for their weather forecasting reports, and the barograph in Eugene in the geology department is the only one known to be on the Oregon coast. Weekly records of weather conditions in Eugene are sent to the weather bureau in Portland.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES

Story by Hal Cochran—Drawings by L. W. Redner TIMBERLAND—CHAPTER 3

"Oh, I won't have any fun playing with a great big man like that," wailed the little girl. The pilot walked up to her and replied, "So you don't want me to be your cousin. Well, just look at who is getting out of the plane now." And Dotty looked up and saw Jack climbing over the side.

"HELLO, Dotty," shouted the little adventurer, as he reached the ground. "Welcome to Timberland," replied his little cousin. And then Jack rushed up and threw his arms around Dotty. Some of the lumberjacks laughed, and one of them said, "That's a fine way to greet your cousin. Why don't you kiss him?"

"WELL, I just will," laughed Dotty. And with that, Jack got a good sound smack on the cheek. The lumberjacks cheered and then crowded around Jack to shake his hand. Of course, they asked him all sorts of questions about his trip and it kept him busy telling them of the flight through the air. (Continued.)

Style News of the Hour

An Exclusive M. & W. Feature

For evening, the satin opera pump takes a band of rhinestones around the top to set off its simplicity.

In lingerie, a new idea has been introduced called "debutante" or "dance sets"—consisting of bandeau, panties, and garters to match, usually of crepe de chine.

Natural color cashmere, called "chair" takes the lead in southern and spring fashions.

The newest sweater takes the form of a man's sweat shirt, although sometimes it bands its neck with fur.

Not in years has high color been as prominent as in the advance showings.

Red leather purses are doing their bit to brighten the street costume.

Suede in pastel shades will be used in footwear.

Much less white and much more color is the slogan of the new fashions.

Everything these days depends on line—trimming is a secondary consideration.
