VARSITY FOOTBALL MEN IN WORKOUT

Twenty candidates, seven centers and 13 punters, reported to Richard S. (Dick) Smith, new football coach of University of Oregon, for the opening spring practice yesterday afternoon.

Chauncey Bishop of Salem, ex-Columbia football star, who was a teammate of Smith and in his day was considered the greatest punter of all time, is here for a couple of days to assist the Webfooters in the art of kicking. Bishop is credited with having made the longest punt, of all time, booting the ball 94 yards in a game against Yale.

He gave the candidates many pointers and was confident that before the fall season rolls around, Oregon will have consistent kickers—the first since the days of Bill Steers.

While Bishop was coaching the punters, Smith was teaching the centers a few tricks. The new mentor is of the opinion that the pivot man controls the key to a team's success, and it is slow, so is the whole team.

The man who can think fast, snap the ball back speedily and accurately is the man who will be the varsity center next year, Smith said.

YALE UNIVERSITY leads in placing players on Walter Camp's mythical All-American football team.

The Elis have been honored on 84 occasions. Harvard ranks second with 74. Then come Princeton, Pennsylvania, Michigan, West Point, Cornell and Dartmouth with 19 or more.

Notre Dame, though usually boasting one of the best eleven in the country, has only placed two men on the Camp team. The late George Glipp was one and Harry Stuhldreher the other. Both were backfield players.

OREGON DEFEATS W. S. C. COUGARS BY 30-26 COUNT

Oregon defeated Washington State College, 30 to 26, last night at the armory in a basketball game that was featured by many long shots by players on both teams.

The Webfooters missed enough foul throws to win an ordinary game, losing out on 11 out of 15 attempts. Washington State also converted four but had only eight chances.

Washington State led in the first five minutes, 6 to 3, but here Oregon rallied, and four baskets in a row by the Webfooters gave them a commanding margin, 11 to 6. When the half ended, however, the visitors had crept to within two points of tying the score, 16 to 18.

The Cougars took advantage of the fatigued Oregonians, who only last Saturday defeated O. A. C. in a grueling game at Corvallis, and not only tied the score, but actually took the lead, 20 to 18.

Oregon soon regained the lead and held it throughout, although the Cougars fought desperately and threatened many times. Hobson's long shots featured. He dropped in six baskets in scoring, leading both teams in fielding Oregon's next game is against Idaho Friday night here. Lineup: Oreg. State 23 Oregon 20
