

THE ENSEMBLE COMPLETES ITS CYCLE

by Peggy Paige

Completely circling the clock—morning, noon, and night—the ensemble costume takes the lead. It is coat and dress to harmonize, for shopping, for tea and even for evening. The finest and most glistening of diaphanous evening gowns must have its evening coat to match—among the fashionables.

And if lady is not supplied with such coats and frocks, she sees to it that her wardrobe contains gowns which suggest the ensemble idea—sleazy straight-lined costumes, with dark shades of lustrous satin simulating the coat, opening up over colorful prints to give hint of a frock underneath.

In selecting your Spring wardrobe, remember—the ensemble leads them all.
