

OREGON LOSES TO AGGIES IN OPENER FOR BASKET TITLE

University of Oregon lost the first of a three-game post season series for the basketball championship of the northern section of the Pacific coast conference to the Oregon Aggies yesterday in the armory, 12 to 15. Close checking on both sides featured the game. The Aggies outplayed Oregon, but at that, they were assisted by the Webfooters' own misdeeds. Failure to convert foul throws cost Oregon the game, the local boys missing seven out of 11.

Oregon jumped into the lead at the start, when Gowans converted two foul throws. A basket by Okerberg gave the Webfooters a four-point lead, however, the Aggies brushed and allied nine points before the home boys knew what it was all about. At half time the score was; Oregon 7, Aggies 9. Neither team scored a basket for the first 10 minutes of the game.

By a burst of speed in the second half, Oregon tied the score when Westergren dropped two field goals after he Aggies had added another basket to their total. After that the visitors urged to the front on seemingly impossible baskets by Ridings and Steele and were never headed.

Ridings and Westergren started. Each not only led his teams in scoring but displayed beautiful floor work. The next game will be played Saturday night at Corvallis, starting at 8:30 o'clock. Should Oregon win it will tie the two institutions, and a game will be necessary to break the deadlock. A victory for the Aggies, however, will give them the northern section title and with it the right to meet California for the championship of the entire conference. Yesterday's lineup:

Oregon (12) (15) Aggies
 Johnson (2) (2) Baker
 Johnson (2) (2) F. (6) Ridings
 Okerberg (3) (3) G. (2) Brown
 Westergren (5) (5) G. (2) Stoddard
 St. (2) (2) Steele
 Referee, Borleske; umpire, Mulligan.

Golf Widows

Somebody answers the telephone bell, and shortly says, "Sure, that's all right." As a result, someone knows just as well that she'll eat all alone on that night.

Somebody else is just walkin' around and getting the fresh open air, seeking a golf ball all over the ground with a spirit that's peppy and rare. Spring is the season when golf's due to start, so the habit is running once more. Dad plays the game and the "golf widow's" part is harkin' to dad tell his score.

Father goes driving, with golf clubs of course, while his wife it can safely be said, would much prefer, with an auto or horse, he would take her out driving instead.

Sport Talk

ONE of the most closely fought national open golf tournaments in history was that staged at the Inverness club, Cleveland, in 1920. That was the year the two English celebrities, Edward Ray and Harry Vardon, made such stellar showings.

Ray, after a hectic battle, finally won the honors with a card of 295. But one stroke behind were four others, one being Vardon. Leo Diegel, Jack Burke and Jock Hutchison completed the quartet.

It was the first time in the event that just a solitary stroke had separated the initial five. Moreover, it was one of the few times that any other, but an American pastime had copped the classic.

Hoodoo of the 13th Hole

Sarazen Wins Tourney on It

By JOE WILLIAMS
 Like Mary K. Brown, Gene Sarazen has both pleasant and unpleasant memories of the thirteenth hole. Sarazen first broke into the headlines in the spring of 1922 when he won a southern championship at New Orleans. It was his first triumph in any tournament of importance.

Going to the twelfth hole on the last round he enjoyed a lead of three shots over the field and seemed to be sitting high, wide and attractive. The twelfth was a par five and not particularly terrifying.

Yet for Sarazen it teemed with miseries of assorted hues and, when his ball dropped finally into the can, an eight has been scored against him, and he was back again even with the field.

Facing him now was the thirteenth hole! The awful thirteenth in the first tournament he ever had a chance to win—and it had just taken him eight to hole out on the last green.

"I kept telling myself 'concentrate, concentrate,'" relates Sarazen, "and before I knew it I was on the green putting for a birdie three—which I made." That put the little Italian back in front and he stayed there.

But as a general proposition the thirteenth hole has not been exactly generous to the former open champion. "I can remember seven matches," says Sarazen, "where I was two up at the thirteenth. I lost five of them."

Sarazen may be listed as a veteran campaigner in golf, a player to whom one hole is no different than another, but he admits he never approaches the thirteenth in a big tournament without a feeling of fear.

His experiences in the open championship at Washington in 1921 may have something to do with this emotion. Let him tell you about them. "The thirteenth hole, a single shot-ter par three, beat me every round. Not once during the tourney was I able to score a par on it. The first round I got a 4, the next a 5, then a 4 and another 5."

Sarazen had better luck in winning the North of England championship last spring, securing three straight birdies at the thirteenth.

Billy Evans Says

UNOFFICIAL world titles are all the rage in the world of sport. Recently in golf, Walter Hagen, British open champion, defeated Cyril Walker, American title-holder, by the astonishing margin of 17 up and 15 o play in a 72-hole match.

By that victory Hagen became the official pro golf champion of the universe. However, the defeat did not worry with it the United States open championship held by Walker.

Then along came Willie Hoppe, 18.2illard champion, with another former pest, Meeting Bob Cannexfax, three-ushion title-holder, at a game new Hoppe, he defeated Cannexfax 400 to 554 in 10 blocks of 60 points.

Cannexfax, however, did not lose his title, for when he agreed to meet Hoppe, probably sensing the inevitable, he stipulated that his title was at stake.

The latest unofficial world title as to do with the boxing game and Eddie "Cannonball" Martin,bantam-weight champion.

In a recent bout at Cleveland, Martin was decisively defeated by Carl Remaine. Referee Matt "Hinkle" warned Tremaine the decision. Throughout the bout Tremaine showed a superiority in every feature of the ring game with the exception of stamina. The youth of Martin gave in that single advantage.

When the bout was arranged, Martin refused to let Tremaine come in at the bantamweight limit, 115 pounds. Tremaine must weigh more than that or there would be no fight. Both fighters tipped the beam at 214, so there was no advantage either way. Tremaine got the decision over the champion, yet Martin retains a title, since both were over three pounds overweight.

By decisively defeating the champion Tremaine has gained national respect; he really is in a position to state terms to the champion when he pair meet in a titular bout, which certain to be staged this summer.

Fight experts will generally consider Tremaine on a par with the champion, but despite such prestige, Martin will still carry the honors despite a decisive defeat, simply because of the three extra pounds.

Commercial Bulletin

BOSTON, March 6.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say: "The wool trade is in a bewildered frame of mind although some few are still holding out against the decline. The market, however, has not been made by the strong holders. On some descriptions it is hardly possible to quote a market at all. There is a disposition to await the London opening Tuesday and the resumption of the Australian sales, together with the showing of dress goods lines by the American Woolen company on Tuesday, which it is hoped will stimulate the market. Up to the present moment the demand for goods has been undeniably slow, although woolen foreign markets are barely steady. The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will publish the following wool quotations:

Scoured basis: Oregon, Eastern No. 1 staple $1.90; fine and F. M. combing $1.50; eastern clothing $1.45; valley No. 1 $1.40 @ 1.42.
 Mohair: Best combing $5.00@5.25; carding $7.50@8.00.
