

ELWOOD HAYNES, AUTO INVENTOR, DIES IN INDIANA

KOKOMO, Ind., April 14.—Elwood Haynes, 68, who in 1894 invented the "horseless" carriage, is dead at his home here, a victim of influenza. Mr. Haynes, who had never fully recovered from a previous attack of the disease, was ill but a few days. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mr. Haynes suffered an attack of influenza while on a trip through the southern states, and on the advice of a physician whom he had consulted, he returned home. Heart disease, with which he long had been afflicted, also contributed to his death.

Illness Little Known.
Few friends knew of the serious illness of the pioneer automobile manufacturer who also gained international reputation as a scientist and metallurgist, and his death last night was a shock to all that knew him. His widow, son and daughter were at his bedside when death came.

On the Fourth of July, 1894, Elwood Haynes, then a young field superintendent for a natural gas company with headquarters at Kokomo, Ind., had a queer bug, without thought of a patent, towed out onto a country road. He drove it triumphantly back into Kokomo, at the remarkable speed of eight miles an hour, under power generated by a gasoline engine. That, it is claimed, was the first trip of a gasoline driven vehicle in America.

Ordered Off Street.
This horseless carriage, which soon became a familiar sight in the streets of Kokomo, was the result of two years of experiments and now is preserved in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C. Mr. Haynes said he was ordered to "get that contraption off the streets" when he drove his first automobile into Chicago.

The automobile was the direct result of the fact that Mr. Haynes had a large territory to cover in his duties as field superintendent for a natural gas company. He desired to make his rounds more rapidly than he could with a horse and started his experiments, being of an inventive turn of mind and having a technical education.

Formed Company.
A year after his first successful trip with his horseless carriage, Mr. Haynes formed a company for the manufacture of automobiles and was president of it for many years. He invented numerous improvements in the automobile.

Mr. Haynes was a native of Hoosier having been born at Portland, Ind., October 14, 1857. After completing the course in the public schools there, he attended Worcester Polytechnic institute at Worcester, Mass., where he was graduated in 1881. Later he was a student at Johns Hopkins university. He was married in 1887 to Miss Bertha Lanterman, also of Portland, Ind. The two children, a son and daughter, both assisted their father in his laboratory work in connection with his factories in Kokomo, Ind.

SICK WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Can Be Carried Comfortably Over The Critical Period by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound —Note Mrs. Headden's Case

Macon, Georgia. — "During the Change of Life I suffered with my whole right side and could not lie on my left side. I was in bed about two months and could not get up only as my son would lift me. After doctoring without relief a man who was rooming with us told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured his mother at the Change of Life, so I began taking your medicine. After taking it for two weeks I could get out of my bed by myself. I am now 53 years old and in better health and stronger than ever in my life. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to many suffering women, young and old, and you may use my name anywhere as long as you please. I will be glad to answer any letters sent to me." — Mrs. F. R. HEADDEN, 5 Holt Avenue, Macon, Georgia.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 200,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The Spotlight

You've been in a theatre when the stage was dark, and a spotlight suddenly focused upon the thing you wanted most to see. Advertisements are like spotlights. They focus attention upon the goods that interest you most.

You could wander in and out a dozen stores and, in the confusion of many objects, overlook what would please you best. Yet by reading the advertisements, without leaving your home you can tell definitely where the desired wares are, their prices, how they will serve you. You can know actual values long before you buy.

Advertisements throw light on new comforts and improvements, too, you might like to own. They let you see conveniences other folks are enjoying—bring them within easy reach.

Let these spotlights guide you to standard goods. They'll help you save. Read the advertisements regularly.
