'BAREE, SON OF KAZAN,' a Vitaphone Picture, with Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

AT LAST it had come—the meeting with that for which he had been seeking. It was in an open, lighted by the cold dawn—a tiny amphitheatre that lay on the side of a ridge, facing the east. With her head toward him, and waiting for him as he came out of the shadows, his scent strong in her keen nose, stood Mahegung, the young wolf.

FLAPPER FANNY says

The more you look back on an old flame, the brighter it blazes.

Adorn Table For Use

Small tables should be adorned in accordance with their intended use. The hall console is formal and should be formally decorated.

Home Hints

IT IS always advisable to wash the feet of new stockings before the first wearing, as the dressing added to the silk frequently lessens the wearing quality.

Cynthia Grey Says:

DEAR Miss Grey: I met a pretty girl several months ago and was having many dates with her until about two weeks ago. Then she claimed I was going out with other girls, which was not true.

Cleaning Furs

To clean the fur on coats or neckpieces lay the collar on a newspaper and sprinkle full of coarse cornmeal. Let it lie for several hours, then shake out the meal.

To Clean Mirrors

Use lukewarm water with a few drops of ammonia in it for cleaning windows and mirrors.

Save Clothesline

Do not leave your clothesline out from week to week. A clothes reel that you can take in after each drying is better.

Never Boil Wool

Never soak or boil wool of any kind. Always squeeze the water out, washing it. This preserves the shape of woolen goods—never wring them, and the wear and tear on the life.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES

Story by Hal Cochran—Drawings by L. W. Redner
MYSTERY ISLAND—CHAPTER 6

AFTER the two adventurers had satisfied their appetites and shared some food with Flip and Flop, Jack suggested that they take a rest while Flip stood watch. "Maybe we will come upon another steamer and be taken on board," he said. "Flip will bark if anything comes a sight."

BOTH Jack and Dotty must have been pretty tired for they slept for several hours. The sacks they had wrapped the lunch basket in made fairly good pillows when rolled up. Finally Jack sat up and looked around him. The moon, which had been shining brightly, was beginning to fade out.

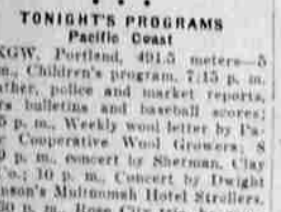

"Gee!" thought Jack, "it will be pretty scary out here if it gets pitch dark." But as he began worrying about that, there appeared a ray of light over the water in the far distance. "Hurrh," he shouted. "The sun is coming up." His shout awoke Dotty, and she said, "What's the matter?" (Continued.)

Improved strains of oats very often up many times in the increased yield of the pedigreed crop.

Acid phosphate or other fertilizers of high phosphorus content almost always give a distinct increase in yield after their application. The yield and weight per bushel is increased and it has also been found that the crop matures at an earlier date and more uniformly than when the fertilizer is not used.

This fertilizer also tends to overcome the tendency of the grain to lodge on heavy soils. On fertile land, the experiment station experts say, the application of barnyard manure is not advisable for oats as it produces too rank growth.

FARM HELPS

THERE are great possibilities, it is made strikingly apparent by various experiment stations, bulletins, particularly those of Michigan, for increasing the profit in raising oats and placing the crop on a much more dependable basis by following the practices of the best oat farmers who plant only high-yielding tested varieties, treat the seed with formaldehyde, take unusual care in preparing the fields for planting and apply acid

FLAPPER FANNY says

It was as if Baree had belonged to the pack always. He had joined it naturally, as other stray wolves had joined it from out of the bush; there had been no ostentation, no welcome such as Mahegung had given him in the open, and no hostility. He belonged with these slim, swift-footed outlaws of the old forests, and his own jaws snapped and his blood ran hot as the smell of the caribou grew heavier, and the sound of its crashing hooves.

It seemed to him they were almost at its heels when they swept into an open plain, a stretch of barren wilderness under a starry, brilliant in the light of the stars and moon. Across its unbroken carpet of snow sped the caribou a spare hundred yards ahead of the pack. Now the two leading hunters so long followed directly in the trail, but shot out at an angle, one to the right and the other to the left of the pursued, and like well-trained soldiers the pack split; in halves and spread out fan-shape in the final charge.

The two ends of the fan forged ahead and closed in, until the leaders were running almost abreast of the caribou, with fifty or sixty feet separating them from the pursued. Thus, adroitly and swiftly, with deadly precision, the pack had formed a horse-shoe cordon of fangs from which there was but one course of flight—straight ahead.

Baree had found his place in the lower rim of the horse-shoe, so that he was fairly well in the rear when the climax came. The snarl made a sudden dip. Straight ahead was the gleam of water—water shimmering softly in the stern, and the light of it went a final great spur of blood through the caribou's bursting heart. Forty seconds would tell the story—forty seconds of a last spurt for life, of a final tremendous effort to escape death. Baree felt the sudden thrill of these moments, and he forged ahead with the others in that lower rim of the horse-shoe as one of the leading wolves made a lunge for the young bull's hump-ster.

There was no time for others to take their place. From the broken end of the horse-shoe Baree heard the caribou's heavy plunge into water. When Baree joined the pack, a maddened, mouth-frothing, snarling horde, Nappamos, the young bull, was well out in the river and swimming steadily for the opposite shore.

The restless movements of the water caused a new and wondering interest held them rigid. Baree closed sharply. A little in the open Baree saw Mahegung, with a big gray wolf standing near her. He went to her again, and this time she remained with flattened ears until he was snuffing her neck. And then, with a vicious snarl, she snapped at him. Her teeth sank deep in the soft flesh of his shoulder, and at the unexpectedness and pain of her attack, he let out a yelp. The next instant the big gray wolf was at him.

To Preserve Lace

If lace is very fine and valuable, it is better to sew it on to a thin piece of muslin or cheesecloth before an ironing edge.

Drying Blankets

In dryer blankets, change the position occasionally and pull the edges straight. Otherwise you will have an uneven edge.

Fair Play

Life is the one game we all have to play just as long as we keep it a living. And what we get out of it day after day quite depends on how much we are giving.

Who men are constantly ready to meet what may come, with the spirit of duty. Also, they play in this game is discreet with the moves that they make always fair.

Things are arranged so we all have our turn. The results are whatever we make 'em. Figure it out—you've had chances to burn, but the rule is, how 'd' do you take 'em?

Unless there's a law that we all want to reach, but we never arrive if we're late. The man who plays fair and then sticks like a leech, is the fellow who wins in the game.
