

LIFE IN EARLY-DAY CHURCH IS TOPIC FOR LESSON

Most Wonderful Experiment in Communism on Record is Characterization Given by Expounder

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. (Editor of The Congregationalist)

OUR lesson tells of the most wonderful experiment in communism on record. It indicates also in what respects the experiment succeeded, and just why it failed.

If all the early Christians had been like Jesus, who is better known by the name of Barnabas, the name that the apostles gave him, the experiment might have succeeded, and a whole new society might have been built up upon the principle of Jesus. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

If all Christians today were like Jesus, or Barnabas, there might be great hope for the establishment of a new social order in which selfishness and mutual aid would occupy the place that competition and self-interest now assume.

But, as someone has said, "you cannot build a marble palace out of mud bricks." One hypocrite, one self-seeker, one man who professes to live according to high principles while he betrays those principles in fact, can wreck the basis of a new order, and plunge society back into depths of disillusionment, suspicion and distrust.

The only sort of communism that would ever work would be a communism in which all honestly believed, which all honestly practiced, and which was primarily a communism of giving and not a communism of getting.

The communism of Barnabas was a communism of giving. He was not looking for anything for himself. All he thought about was helping other people. He had a farm, and he went and sold it, and brought the money to the disciples' feet for the benefit of all.

It was his privilege to do that. He was under no obligation to do it except the obligation of his own heart and conscience. There is no evidence that he was required to do it. But he had learned the lesson of God's grace.

The communism of Ananias was a communism of hypocrisy. He pretended to be thinking about others, but he was thinking of himself. He sought to get the credit of giving up all that he had for others, but he lied, and was not sincere.

He did not have to give up his possessions, as Peter reminded him, but he had no business dealing in lying and hypocrisy. Is it not strange, too, that lying and hypocrisy are often found even in the most noble surroundings?

Christianity is first of all a matter of freedom. Its law is a law of liberty and love. Laws may protect society against abuses, and may do much to restrain individuals for the benefit of others, or of society as a whole, but law can never uphold the kingdom of God, the society of love and brotherhood where each esteems other better than himself.

The Ananias can wreck any social experiment, whereas, on the other hand, it wouldn't matter much what the form of society happened to be, monarchy, republic, soviet, or anything else, if all the men in it were like Barnabas. The Barnabas spirit would soon change things in the right direction.

The task of the Christian church is to create a race of men like Barnabas—at least as unselfish, devoted to the commonweal, and Christ-like, as Barnabas proved in his action. That ideal and that task must never be compromised or lost sight of. But in all our social building it must not be forgotten that we have Ananias as well as Barnabas.

Text: Acts 4: 32-5:5

And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold.

And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

And Joseph, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas (which is being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus.

Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession.

And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

While it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

nothing to offer. Communism as a thing that unregenerate men could hope to put into practice, and thus establish a new society over night, is unthinkable for any sound logic, as it is futile and dangerous in practice.

We have seen in our own day all that that sort of communism has to offer in experiences in Russia, where we are told, it is now being abandoned.

But over against such futile and Christless communism we must set, not an ideal of individualism and selfish, or self interest, but the ideal of love and service, of devotion to the commonweal.

The communism of Christ as a hope, and as an ideal, may as a very principle of practice for those who are willing in freedom and honesty to accept it, should not be lost sight of in an age when communism is being tried in the dust.
