JOSEPH CAILLAUX AGAIN IS CALLED

Inherited Finance Knowledge. He inherited from his father a knowledge of financial problems and in time was acknowledged to be the best authority on the subject in the republic.

At 25 he was made governmental inspector of finances. Ten years later he was selected deputy in the chamber of deputies for the department of Sarthe and held this seat until 1919. He was minister of finance in four cabinets and was prime minister two years.

In 1924, fatal year for the world, Caillaux became the object of verbal thunderbolts hurled at him by Figaro, a powerful Paris paper, edited by Gaston Calmette.

she had the enemy at her doors outside and she had the enemy inside working through paid agents.

Caillaux, too, was charged with having dealt with the enemy. The charges were supported by claims that in houses of all persons arrested were found letters from Caillaux.

Brought to Trial. The chamber voted away his immunity from arrest and prosecution. He was brought to trial before the senate sitting as a high court in February, 1924. His enemies were clamoring for his head. While he had been in prison, some of the men with whom he was said to have corresponded had been executed.

On April 23, 1920, he was acquitted of treason, but found guilty of the minor charge of holding relations with the enemy calculated to harm France and her allies.

As he had already been in prison for nearly three years, he was at once dismissed and went to his home in Mamey.

lecture, the students at the university tried to mob him. Last May when he was in Toulouse a band of royalists set upon him and badly beat him.

It was known that one of the first acts of the new government of the left would be to grant Caillaux amnesty and thus throw open the way to him for renewed political activity.

After a spirited debate in 1924, the senate voted amnesty by 169 votes to 105.

The same body which condemned Caillaux thus handed back to him a new opportunity in life. And all France is excitedly waiting to see what he will do with it.

TIONAL FOREST PLANS ARE READY

Block out from a tree 400 years old on the main street, 122 W. of the street; a small relief map of Cascade national forest, in color, Cascade state forest, 825 W. of the street; a reproduction of the Castle Rock home in the Griffin neighborhood; a special display in the Drug store window, 701 W. of the street.

The idea of celebrating a national week originated on the Pacific coast six years ago. Mr. Macduff is the man who first started it. It quickly grew to national proportions and in 1921 President Wilson issued a proclamation which the federal government and forest service behind the movement.

He also issued proclamations in 1922 and this year President Coolidge issued a proclamation designating the week of America's fore- and changing the name Cascade National Forest week.

Because Lane county has more forest land in its boundaries than any other county in the United States, it is of first importance to have a week of first importance to the people of this county. It is the hope of the forest service that this week will be a most enthusiastic one.
