

HEARING OF ROSS PROCEEDINGS IN PORTLAND OPENS

PORTLAND, Ore., April 30.—Hearing of Dr. Thomas Ross' quo warranto proceedings attacking the right of John C. Veatch to hold office as his successor as a member of the state fish commission was begun today before Circuit Judge Hewitt. Dr. Ross, who was ousted by the governor, called upon Veatch to show by what authority he claims to hold office.

John W. Kaste, attorney for Dr. Ross, attacked the actions of Governor Pierce in removing Dr. Ross and in the subsequent hearings in the case granted by the governor. He characterized the governor as "accuser, judge and jury."

"Under our constitution," said Kaste, "all judicial power is vested in the courts. If that is true there can be no judicial power vested in the governor. When Governor Pierce sat in his office and heard and acted upon charges brought by himself, he was acting in a judicial capacity."

On December 9, Kaste said, Ross received word from the governor that he was removed from the commission. Ross, according to Kaste, refused to quit, claiming that the governor must show cause for removing him. The attorney general informed the governor that Ross was right, Kaste said, and Ross subsequently received word from the attorney general to appear before the governor to show cause.

"When Ross appeared before the governor," declared Kaste, "the governor said: 'I charge you with extravagance in the administration of the commission's affairs.'"

"Yet, only by action of two members of the commission can there be any extravagance. If Ross was extravagant, Commissioner Kendall, who voted with him in employing Shoemaker, also was extravagant. Kendall, at the examination of Ross, told the governor he had worked with and voted with Ross and that if Ross was guilty of extravagance, he was too."

"Kendall dared the governor to remove him and the governor didn't accept the dare."

FEDERAL FUNDS IN FORESTS URGED

set industry giving permanent employment to more than 80,000 men and producing annually more than $200,000,000 in wealth. To accomplish this much to be desired and will require the best thought and the active cooperation of all our forward-looking citizens. To put our logging forest areas at work, to keep all of our 25,000,000 acres of forest land in Oregon busy growing timber we must have the federal government, the state and private owners actively cooperating.

"The state of Oregon should enact legislation which will enable the state to acquire cut-over lands for reforestation purposes. This should be done for two reasons. The federal government cannot handle the whole job as quickly as it should be handled. In addition to this the state should get into the game for the purely selfish reason of an obligation for the welfare of its own citizens.

"Private owners must be encouraged to hold and reforest their cut-over lands. Under present conditions only those who are most advantageously situated can convince themselves that they should practice forestry on their logged-off lands. The long time investment, the fire risk, the application of the general property tax to lands growing timber are very definite obstacles to the general participation of private owners in timber production.

"1. We must have a system of forest fire prevention and control so effective that forest properties may properly be held to be insurable risks.

"2. There should be a classification of privately owned forest lands as to productive capacities. The private owner should know in a general way how much timber his land will produce within a given period.

"3. There should be a revision of our tax laws as affecting lands devoted to growing timber crops. The general property tax was devised to apply to properties producing a crop each year.

"Coupled with all this our people must become forestry minded. This demands a persistent program of education. When our people are fully informed concerning the importance of forestry to Oregon, the future of our great lumber industry will be assured."

County Agent has Flax Applications

Three applications for flax seed for experimental planting have been received at the office of O. S. Fletcher, Lane county agricultural agent, from the Junction City district. One application has been received from the Noti district. The seeds for the experimental plantings will be ordered by the county agent. Any farmer who desires to plant the flax may obtain information at the agent's office. It is announced. "We believe that with at least four experimental plantings made that data on the feasibility of flax growing in Lane can be determined this year," the county agent states.
