SPORT PROGRAM IN VARSITY WEEK-END FESTIVAL IS HEAVY

Sport followers of the various University of Oregon athletic teams will be treated to a mecca of events during this week-end, providing the inclement weather is absent. Track, baseball and tennis will feature the program which is given as part of the university junior week-end festivities.

The track meet scheduled between Oregon and the Oregon Aggies Saturday at 2:30 will be the paramount event of the week. Both teams are approximately the same in regard to advance strength, as both lost to the Washington team by about equal scores. Oregon had a five point advantage, however, according to the final counts between the meets, which was Washington 90, Oregon Aggies 41 and Washington 85, Oregon 46. The local varsity will be slightly handicapped in this meet, however, Walter Kelsey will be out for the rest of the season due to a severe case of la grippe, it was announced yesterday.

Track Men Out

With the announcement of Kelsey being out it makes a total of three jolts handed to the varsity this year. First Harry Holt, the fastest sprinter out was declared ineligible due to grades, then last week Tiny Johnson, premier weight man, was placed in the hospital with a severe case of the mumps. However, the varsity is still conceded a good chance to upset the dope and hand the Aggies another defeat. Cleaver has shown new form in the hurdles and is expected to compete as he did last year due to the complete recovery of the injury he received last year. Carruthers, Tuck and Ralph Staley will compete in the hurdle races with Cleaver.

In this meet Hayward will use virtually all the men turning out for track as there is no limit on the number to be entered. Westerman and Extra, both exceptional fast sprinters have completely recovered from pulled leg muscles which has been holding them back all year.

Tennis on Schedule

Following the track meet in importance will be the tennis meet between the varsity and an aggregation of Oregon Aggies, Saturday. The local varsity defeated the Aggies in the first meet held in Corvallis by a 4 to 3 score. This score shows the equalization of the two teams and fans are promised another close event. The varsity entrants will be picked from Meyer, captain, Oberberg, Mead, Adams, and Hayden. Next week the squad will go to Seattle where they will meet the Huskies in a match which was scheduled for here last Saturday but was called off due to rain. This meet will be played Thursday, May 28. Immediately after this meet the Webfooters will enter in the Coast Conference championship meet to be held in Seattle May 29 and 30. Oregon is conceded a good chance to place first in this conference meet.

The freshmen will furnish the baseball. They are scheduled to meet the Rooks in a two-game series. The first contest will be played Friday at 2:30 as the sport opener. The second tilt is billed for Saturday morning at 10 in order to give way for the afternoon track meet. The freshman have a comparatively weak team according to dope, but have a real pitching staff. Baker and Ross have been showing varsity ability in the box but the infielders seem to slip occasionally. The Eugene high school team defeated them in a six-inning practice game last night 5 to 3. The game was marred by numerous errors on both sides. The freshman making four and the preppers two.

Baseball is Feature

The varsity baseball team will not be seen in action on the campus this week-end as they will be playing Whitman College in Walla Walla Saturday. The freshman track men will migrate to Corvallis Friday for a dual track and field meet with the Aggie Rooks and will also be out of the campus sportlight.

The intra-mural baseball championship will be decided Saturday and will be an added feature of the athletic program. Two teams will be played tomorrow and the winners of those will tangle for the highest campus honor.

The list of athletic events scheduled for this week-end are: Friday—Underclass tug-of-war 9:15 o'clock, Freshman numeral wearers will paint the "O" on Skinner's butte at 10 a. m. and with the varsity order of the "O" leading them. The Freshman baseball team will meet the Oregon Aggie Rooks in the first game for the feature of the day.

Saturday — Frosh-Rook baseball contest 10:00 a. m. Varsity-Aggie tennis meet 1:30. Varsity-Aggie track meet 2:30. Doughnut baseball championship playoff 4.

Hockey is Played

The hockey season for the University of Oregon women had its official opening today. The various class teams will vie for the campus championship during the next two weeks. The schedule calls for a round-robin affair.

Compulsory practice sessions have terminated and the actual playing of games has started. The degree of skill with which the girls handle their sticks coupled with their knowledge of the sport promises something out of the ordinary in a sport which is just beginning to gain recognition in this country, state those in charge of women's physical education.

The completed schedule for class hockey is as follows: May 20—Juniors-seniors; May 25, juniors-freshmen; May 27, freshmen-sophomores; May 29, juniors-sophomores; June 1, seniors-freshmen; June 3, seniors-sophomores.

Billy Evans Says—

By BILLY EVANS

HOW good a companion is the welterweight king, Mickey Walker?

Since he won that honor he has done little in defense of his title. In many of his bouts his opponents have been easy picking, almost setups.

Walker, shortly after winning his title, got in bad by his refusal to meet Dave Shade. If Walker is as good a fighter as believed to be, he should have no great fear of Shade.

However, he has consistently refused to meet the Californian, and until recently was under suspension in New York state because of his failure to do the bidding of the commission.

Walker is shortly to meet Harry Greb, middleweight champion. While Walker's title is not in danger because of the weight difference, the meeting should be a good test of his ability.

• • •

Greb is the most unorthodox boxer in all the world. His style is most difficult to fathom. If Walker succeeds in beating Greb, I doubt if he will, he will have established his right to be classed as a real champion.

TYRUS COBB TELLS ABOUT TEAM WORK

DETROIT, Mich., May 20.—"What's the matter with the Tigers?"

Tyrus Cobb, their manager, made this answer today:

"The Tigers are not, and have never been as good a ball club as most fans liked to believe."

Only Cleveland, Boston and Chicago, the three low teams in the final percentage columns last year, made more errors than the Tigers, the Georgian pointed out. "Individual effort wins ball games," he said. "It is the player with the bat patch that drives in runs. There are no 'push over' teams in the American league. Every game the Tigers win means a hard battle through nine innings."

Cobb then advanced another contributory cause to the Tiger's reversals.

"Psychology plays a prominent part in the baseball," he said. "A ball club that is beaten consistently, especially by narrow margins (we have lost ten games by one run) has a heavy psychological point to overcome."

BABE RUTH STARTS PRACTICE ON FIELD

NEW YORK, May 20.—Announcing a program of daily training which includes at least one hours batting practice at the Yankee stadium, Babe Ruth today entered upon the final week of his fight for health with a view to rejoining the Yankees when they play Boston next Tuesday upon their return from the western tour.

His first workout yesterday after six weeks in the hospital, suffering from indigestion and influenza, found him weak and pale but still able to plant the ball in his favorite spot—the right field bleachers. With a corps of reporters and workmen in the field to chase his long hits, he wielded his big stick for the first time in forty-three days with an effect indicative of the fact that illness had not robbed him of his keen eye and powerful arm.

His uniform hung on him loosely. He had lost fifty-four pounds in the hospital, bringing his weight down to 170. He expressed satisfaction over his first practice period.

BASE BALL SIMPLIFIED by BILLY EVANS

Why doesn't the infield fly rule apply with a runner on first base only and less than two out?

The thought of the infield fly rule was to offer protection to the runner by automatically retiring the batsman and thereby doing away with the runners being forced to advance and be in danger of being doubled up.

With only first base occupied it is a physical impossibility to make a double play on a fly ball to the infield if the batsman runs on his hit.

One of the cardinal rules of baseball is that the batsman should always run out his batted ball not matter how puny the effort.

If disgusted at having hit a pop fly to the infield, he stops running and walks towards his bench, there is a possibility of making the double play and he should be penalized for his indifference.

Calling the batsman out on an infield fly with less than two out and only first base occupied, would do away with much of the initiative of the game. It would tend to make the efforts of the batsman in many cases entirely too machine-like, automatic.

It is the last half of the ninth and the score is 2 to 1 in favor of the visiting team. There are runners on first and third and one out.

The squeeze-play is called for and the runner on third starts home with the pitch. The catcher, in his anxiety to make a play on the runner, pushes the batsman out of the way and touches him with the ball before he reaches the plate.

The catcher is thrown to the ground by the force of the collision. The runner on first, after reaching second and noting the catcher sprawling on the ground, starts for third. The catcher regains his feet and throws him out at that base.

What is the proper ruling on such a play?

Answer

When the catcher, in his anxiety to make a play at the plate pushed the batsman out of the way, he laid himself open to double penalty.

Such action on the part of the catcher is construed as a balk, also interference.

The runner, apparently retired at the plate, is entitled to score, while the runner going from first to third and thrown out at that base should be sent back to second.

The interference entitles the batsman to first, while the balk gives the runners the right to advance one base.
