

LIFESAVING MADE SCIENCE IN NEW RED CROSS BOOK

Life-saving, as taught by the American Red Cross, is now standard in the United States, so that not only the members of the Red Cross, but the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and other organizations, schools and clubs are now approved and scientific methods of promoting water safety will be given with satisfaction a new and revised edition of "Red Cross Life-Saving Methods," now ready for free distribution through the San Francisco office, announces Miss Grace Norton, Red Cross secretary.

The new book giving the technique of life-saving under all conditions, as well as of resuscitation, without which the rescuer would often be without avail. After outlining the various swimming and life-saving tests, the reader is instructed in the various approaches to the drowning person so as to avoid the feared death-grip, and to avoid the danger of carrying the victim to the shore.

"The life-saver has in his own two hands the most effective way to bring a person to animation," says the book. "His use of the operator is necessary in this method, and he may continue for a long period to give the treatment until the person has recovered from the physical exertion. The method is equally applicable to any case where breathing has been suspended by asphyxiation or shock. Don't give up, the Red Cross advises. The pressure method has been known to revive persons who have been under water as long as a half-hour."

A valuable chapter is devoted to water front protection for summer resorts, so as practically to preclude accidents. It describes the use of floats, buoys, life boats, ring buoys, row boats and canoes, grappling irons and the training of life-saving crews.

Teaching beginners to swim is the theme of another illustrated chapter, in which the different strokes are based on the swimming habits of birds and animals.

A simple method of keeping check on swimmers, and one of especial appeal to boys and girls, is the water-buddy system. Bathes are divided into pairs, each to make a "buddy" of the other, developing a sense of mutual responsibility. Long bathing, in fact, responsible for many fatalities.

Water safety also involves simple rules, based on common sense, regarding the overloading of boats, swimming in the heat of the day or just after eating and the towing of crowded boats with danger of upsetting. And, at all times, the non-swimmer should be kept in shallow waters.

Miss Norton will be glad to order this book for anyone who desires it.

Record Crowd at Heilig Sees one Of Best Programs

WAS NOT FIT TO DO HER WORK

Dreadful Condition of Mrs. Fullerton's Health Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Clearfield, Pa.—"I cannot begin to tell you how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. Before taking it I couldn't stand on my feet without pains running all through my whole body. From my waist down, just like threads pulling. I was not fit to do any work. My mother got me to try the Vegetable Compound and I have found great benefit, and I not only recommend it for such troubles, but to build up the whole system. I have used it for most everything that goes wrong with me. When I begin to feel nervous and irritable I don't stop long in getting a bottle of the Vegetable Compound if I haven't got one in the house. It gives me an appetite and makes a new woman of me. You may use this testimonial in my own town or anywhere else, and I will answer any letters I receive."

Mrs. ERNE FULLERTON, 626 S. 2nd Street, Clearfield, Pa.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

Manager McDonald, and for both shows every act was roughly applauded.

The bill opened with the Oregonian screen review, a large part of which was given over to scenes taken from the Lane County Pioneer pageant. The interesting sections of the parade were caught by the cameraman, and the reel has been attracting interest all over the state.

Prevoost and Goulet, in a "vaudeville melange," opened the vaudeville bill, and immediately put the audience in a merry mood. Prevoost is particularly clever as a tumbler-comedian, and he brought forth gales of laughter with his clever imitations.

The audience was loathe to let Harry Maxfield and Will Stone stop their act, and the two men obliged with several encores. Maxfield plays the piano exceptionally well, while Stone, in an intimate way, gets over a lot of comedy chatter.

Several life-like figures were introduced by Dave Rafael, master ventriloquist, and one live "dummy" completely fooled everyone. He has one of the most elaborate acts of this kind ever presented here. A pleasing combination of a comb and a ukulele featured in Rafael and Delaney's negro harmony act. The tall boy was particularly well received in this.

The final act closed the bill in fitting style. It was an elaborately staged number, with two exceptionally clever dancers, Marjorie Lee and Dick Maxwell. Irvin Fields played the violin and Mary Allison accompanied on the piano.

The bill on the whole was one of the best in a long time, and it fully deserved the record crowd.

Pictures of Noted U. O. Athletes to Remain at Obaks

The "picture gallery" that has always attracted a great deal of interest at "Obaks" will be displayed in the new pool and billiard room on the mezzanine floor, announces W. R. Wallace, proprietor. Dozens of pictures of historic Oregon athletic pictures are included in the collection, and all are now being shined up, and placed in prominent places along the walls.

The famous team that defeated Pennsylvania eleven in 1916 is there, together with a play by play account of the game. The 1919 team that raised just one point of defeating Harvard is also there. "Old Timers" will recall many of the athletes of yore days, many of whom still hold intercollegiate records. The collection is a valuable source of data for sportsmen and others interested in the university, it is declared.

CORDONS OF CRAFT STRIKE RUM TRADE

I tried to run it in an bootlegger's idle boat.

A few weeks ago hiring such a boat as I rode in would have been an impossibility. Those who have been such craft wouldn't have looked at such "chicken feed," as I paid. For the profits they could earn in running liquor dwarfed any such insignificant transactions as boat hire.

But today—to many men who have lain idle for several weeks, with ill-gotten gains mostly spent in high living, and with no prospect of the return of the rosy past—even chicken feed is not passed by.

Putting out from Jones Inlet with several suspicious glances from the two Coast Guard picket boats anchored there, we entered the open sea.

Heading east along the coast we made our way toward Jones Inlet. Our speed was about 20 knots. Not a boat was in sight save a lone tramp heading up for New York.

Suddenly out from shore from a concealed inlet shot a war-gear picket boat. Straight toward us it headed. Faintly a megaphoned call to halt came to us.

Our answer was an increased burst of speed. There was a bullet that clipped a wave a hundred yards to starboard of us.

By this time both boats were racing at top speed.

Swiftly the rum runner drew away from her slower pursuer. Doggedly the picket boat hung on.

Then we slowed down and gradually permitted her to overhaul us. She drew alongside with an alert, reinforced young officer inquiring what it was all about.

With a Coast Guard officer aboard us as a guarantee of our honesty of purpose he had to be satisfied, but it was very evident that he questioned the sanity of newspapermen who testified out the alertness of an armed patrol boat in a boat whose very lines shrieked "rum-runner."

The test of the efficiency of the Coast Guard patrol was part of an inspection of what was, formerly "Rum Row."

Everywhere the story was the same. Not a chance was there for a shore boat to establish contact with a supply ship at sea. Each of them I found to be picketed with two to four ships of the Coast Guard patrol. Many of the rum ships were hauling up their anchors and making sail even as we passed.

In one place we found four rum ships. They were surrounded by 12 vessels of the Coast Guard. And at night the lights winking out from each of the vessels gave that far-to-sea portion of the ocean the appearance of the entrance to New York harbor. Discouragement is having hold of the rum fleet. One skipper offered to trade a case of whiskey for two cartons of cigarettes.

Others not so affable as this skipper who invited us aboard to have a drink, were surly in their disappointment.

If the Coast Guard can maintain the present rigidity of their watch, the importation of liquor from the ocean, at least, is at an end.

Ham and Eggs to Be Served Sunday

A ham and eggs breakfast, prepared by men for men, will be held Sunday morning at eight o'clock at the First Christian church, announces Rev. E. V. Stivers, pastor. The men will do all the cooking, and plenty of ham and eggs will be on hand, he states. At least 250 are expected to attend.

C. R. Clark, boy scout executive of Eugene, will be the principal speaker, and will discuss the scout work in Lane county. Prof. C. H. Hobbate will be toastmaster, and will lead the singing.

FLOOD DAMAGES IN MORROW ARE HUGE

and Lexington, a distance of nine miles, was almost filled with earth and stones that had washed down the hillsides. Some of the stones weighed several hundred pounds. The highway was not closed.

The flood subsided quickly when the water from Black Horse canyon drained into Willow creek, but a trail of mud and waste was left behind. One residence in town had a foot of silt on its floors after the waters subsided.

The water system is not thought to have been damaged, and a comparatively short time will enable residents and business houses to have their pipes back in condition. Some damage to farm houses was done up the canyon.

Club Opposes S. P. Closing Crossings

The petition of the Southern Pacific to close crossings in the Fairmount district at Emerald, Agate, Columbia, Orchard and Walnut streets was opposed by the East Eugene Development club in a resolution adopted at its meeting last night. Paul P. Farrons, representing the railroad company, declared that the crossings were dangerous and expensive to maintain, but residents stated that the crossings were needed as an outlet for traffic in that district.

T. H. Garrett, E. H. Hall and Roger J. Williams were named to file a protest with the public service commission when it conducts a hearing on this question May 28.

The association decided that it would petition the city council to allow the members to convert the lot owned by the city at the north end of Moss street into a park. Prof. F. S. Dunn will appear before the council at the next meeting. He will also present a petition asking that the chartered remains of the old hand factory in that district be removed.
