

POST OFFICE SETS JUNE 1 TO 7 FOR BETTER MAIL WEEK

The United States postal department has determined to curb careless correspondents and parcel post users who are responsible for a drag on the postal service which causes an enormous economic loss each year, declares Darwin E. Moran, postmaster here.

With a view to reducing the dead letters and parcels, now going to the dead letter office at the rate of 21,000,000 letters and 800,000 parcels a year, Postmaster General New has declared the week of June 1 to 7 "Better Mailing Week," says Mr. Moran, and a nation-wide campaign will be conducted to educate every one to use more care in addressing mail.

"If everyone who mailed a letter or parcel put a return address on the envelope (and the proper place is the upper left hand corner, not the back) the dead letter office could be closed and a vast amount of time, energy and money could be saved," says Mr. Moran. "More than 90 per cent of dead letters contain no clue to the sender on the envelope."

"Mistakes are bound to occur," says Mr. Moran, "but investigation of claims and complaints divulges that in the vast majority of cases it is the mailer rather than the postal clerk who makes the error. We are going for that goal of perfection, and we would like for you to cooperate with us and help reducing that appalling dead letter revenue. It can be done by:

- Rules Are Given
- Addressing letters plainly, leaving out nothing that will help the carrier make delivery.
- Putting return address in upper left-hand corner.
- Using strong cord and stout paper.

Of the 21,803,000 pieces of mail which went to the dead letter office last year, 100,000 letters were perfectly blank envelopes. Cash removed from dead letters amounted to $85,523 which was turned into the United States treasury because its owners could not be located owing to lack of return and other addresses. Postage stamps amounting to $12,105 were similarly found in unreturned and unreturnable mail. Checks, drafts and money orders amounting to $3,545,542 likewise were found but they represented only so much paper because they could not be cashed and have to be held a year for reclaiming, then to be destroyed.

"Nixies" Are Expensive

The revenue of the dead letter office is sufficient to keep that institution functioning but it is not nearly enough to pay the annual bill for support of the "Nixie," as postal employees call a letter or parcel so improperly addressed that it cannot be delivered to the addressee nor returned to the sender without special treatment. This special treatment, called directory service, costs the taxpayer $1,740,000 a year. In New York City alone it costs $500 a day to look up addresses. Approximately 200,000,000 pieces of mail yearly are given directory service. The simple addition of a return address would obviate it entirely, post officials say.
