Thomas R. Marshall is Dead

END COMES AS HE SITS UP IN BED, READING

War-Time Vice-President Apparently Recovering From Attack

Recurrence of Heart Attack Takes Life Away Suddenly

WASHINGTON, June 1. Thomas R. Marshall, war-time vice-president of the United States, died here today.

He passed away at the New Willard hotel here, where he had been ill for several days with a cold and a heart affection.

The end came unexpectedly as the former vice-president had shown some improvement in the week he had been confined to his hotel room and plans had been made for his return to his home in Indianapolis some time this week.

Accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Marshall came here a week ago today. On his arrival he went to the hotel, complaining of great exhaustion.

When physicians were summoned it was found he had suffered from a heart attack. He regained strength gradually however, and soon was in such a condition that it was possible for Mrs. Marshall to leave the bedside to attend to various personal engagements.

Death resulted from a recurrence of a heart attack which he suffered a week ago. Tentative plans were made for burial at Marion, Ind., near his father and mother and a foster child who died recently.

When the end came he was sitting up in bed reading from the Bible to which he had turned throughout life for consolation and guidance and into whose passages he often delved in his office adjoining the senate chamber inasmuch as his presence was not required as presiding officer.

Only a nurse was at his bedside. Mrs. Marshall was in an adjoining room. Suddenly slumping down upon the pillows, he passed away without a word and apparently without pain.

EXPORTS FOR OREGON BANK 17TH IN UNION

Grain Heads List For State, According to Report of Department

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—Finishing the year 1924 in seventeenth place among the different states of the Union, in the race for export markets, Oregon's merchandise shipments abroad totaled $70,503,929, according to statistics just released by the Department of Commerce.

Just ahead of Oregon in the race was Maryland with a trade margin of less than $700,000, while runner-up in the struggle was North Carolina, whose total exports for the year were more than $8,000,000 less than those of Oregon.

Wheat, grain, exports amounting to $28,968,151 led the list of foreign shipments from Oregon, and wheat flour was second with a valuation of $10,173,540, the two forming the mainstays of Oregon's efforts. Others on the list following the order of their relative importance: Boards, planks and scantlings valued at $3,985,419; timber $3,502,102; apples (in boxes) $3,885,705; prunes and canned fruits, $3,378,549; hops $2,008,406; canned and pickled salmon, $1,179,577; milk and cream $1,442,438, and barley with a valuation of $480,828.

Exports amounting to more than $100,000,000 for the year were attained by eleven of the fifty-two states and regions included in the tabulation. They were Texas, with figures of $737,218,927; New York, $731,693,592; Pennsylvania, $293,451,131; Illinois, $238,314,270; California, $234,984,210; New Jersey, $223,921,291; Louisiana, $223,847,224; Michigan, $177,876,634; Virginia, $159,498,225; Ohio, $133,539,392; and Massachusetts, with merchandise valuations of $114,418,430. Minnesota, with shipments valued at $99,880,400, was just outside the first eleven states, while Nevada, with exports amounting to but $233,413 brought up the rear of the entire list.

Report is New.
This is the first time in the history of government trade statistics, according to Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, under whose charge the figures were compiled, that an attempt has been made to show the relative yearly standing of the different states and regions of the Union in the never-ending struggle for foreign trade.

Formerly official trade figures gave only the port from which shipments were cleared. Inland producers, desirous of finding out what agricultural and manufactured goods came from their regions wanted the commerce department to adopt some other system. The outcome was the new compilation which is based on through-bills-of-lading, and therefore, in the case of some states, reflects but a part of their total foreign trade and for others includes goods produced elsewhere. The elements of seasonal fluctuation, says Director Klein, should also be considered.

CAPT. ROBT. F. SCOTT.

FRANKLIN WAS FROZEN TO DEATH IN ATTEMPT TO DISCOVER THE NORTH POLE

ANDREE ATTEMPTED TO REACH THE NORTH POLE IN A BALLOON AND WAS NEVER HEARD FROM.

SHACKLETON DIED IN ATTEMPT TO REACH THE SOUTH POLE

THERE is a cold goddess who is hidden among the eternal snows of the polar regions, and for every man who returns from her domain another must remain there forever.

Rosid Amundsen is somewhere up in the white emptiness with his airplane.

Will he come back from this trip to the north pole? Or will he add his name to the long list of those who sought the goddess of eternal winter and met the specter of death?

Scott's Death Recalled
Amundsen's adventure recalls that of Captain Robert F. Scott, whose tragic adventure was so closely bound up with Amundsen's discovery of the south pole.

Scott reached the pole, by dog sledges, just five weeks after Amundsen.

OREGON LOSES FIGHT BEFORE HIGHEST COURT

Compulsory Attendance of Public Schools Held to Be Illegal

Many Other States With Similar Laws Will be Affected

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—Oregon lost in the supreme court today its fight to compel children to attend public schools.

The court held that the state in enforcing compulsory education laws, cannot require the attendance of children in public schools, to the exclusion of private or parochial schools.

The Oregon compulsory education law, requiring children between the ages of eight and 16 to attend public schools, therefore was declared invalid.

The decision had been awaited with unusual interest because of the peculiar circumstances of the litigation, and because many other states have compulsory education laws. The Oregon law was attacked by the Society of the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary and the Hill Military academy. Throughout the controversy there were many charges that the statute had been inspired by the Ku Klux Klan.

Justice McReynolds, delivering the opinion of the court, said the inevitable practical result of enforcing the Oregon act would be destruction of the present parochial schools and other private primary schools, which are engaged in a kind of undertaking not inherently harmful, but long regarded as useful and meritorious.

"Certainly there is nothing in the present record to indicate that they have failed to discharge their obligations to patrons, students or the state," the court continued. "And there are no peculiar circumstances or present emergencies which demand extraordinary measures relative to primary education."

"We think it entirely plain that the act of 1922 unreasonably interferes with the liberty of parents and guardians to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control."

"As often heretofore pointed out, rights guaranteed by the constitution may not be abridged by legislation which has no reasonable relation to some purpose within the competency of the state."

"The fundamental theory of liberty upon which all governments in this union repose, excludes any general power of the state to standardize its children by forcing them to accept its
