versal life, constantly evolving into high and better forms, not at first created perfect as some theologians would have us believe but left to man for further evolution and improvement.

"It is much more flattering to me to think that we are evolving into something better than that as the older theologians would have us believe we were created perfect in the garden of Eden and fell into disgrace afterwards; even a man who would construct a machine which would do wrong so quickly and so thoroughly would be called a very poor mechanic. The Universal Force which is creating all things is belied by such implication.

"The theory of evolution should, of course, continue to be taught in public schools, as should every other great truth, because evolution is truth."
