Sergeant Harper telephoned police headquarters and just as he placed himself to watch the automobile, a taxicab drove up and Edward Miller alighted and went to the taxi cab. Sergeant Harper called upon him to keep away from the car and Miller opened fire, wounding the sergeant in the shoulder in a volley of five shots. Six shots, five of which entered Miller's body, instantly killing him and the sixth passing through Miller's hat. Miller was identified as a convicted bootlegger.

THE WHY OF TAILORED CLOTHES FABRICS!

There is nothing supernatural about the fabrics that go into clothes that are tailored, but it is the manufacturing process that makes the value. Woollens made from two, three or four ply thread, woven with a double, tripple and quadruple twist, both warp and woof, are becoming more popular through the service that the method of production insures. The more ply to a thread the more strength, the same as with a rope—the greater number of plys the stronger it is. This alone does not make the fabric. It is when this extra strong thread is woven with a double or quadruple twist both warp and woof that we achieve a fabric that combines the strength necessary for the hardest wear with a firmness or shape-retaining quality so greatly in demand. It is the method of construction and not the name that is responsible for the popularity of these fabrics. It matters not whether we call them Argyles, Grants, Peebles, Keltie, Heatherhill or some other name, the method of construction is the same. These are the fabrics that are used by high class reputable tailors, because they retain their shape and hold their color better than cheaper materials, thus reducing the cost of up-keep and in the long run making your clothes cost less. There are hundreds of patterns on display at our shop, awaiting your selection, and we guarantee style and fit.
