

FOUR AMERICAN LEAGUERS FACE FIGHTING CHARGE

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—(AP)—Four members of the Philadelphia American league baseball club, Ed Hommel, Cy Perkins, Ira Thomas and Mickey Cochrane, are to appear in court today to answer charges of participation in what was described as a "free-for-all" fight during a boxing match at the Athletics baseball park Monday night.

The ball players were watching the bout and in seats nearby sat four brothers named Gootleman. As the bout progressed considerable chatter was given out and forth on the capabilities of men in the ring. The remarks continued and then, it is said, one of Connie Mack's Athletics made a remark reflecting upon the ancestry of one of the fighters.

The Gootleman were said to have resented the slur and retaliated with stronger chatter, aimed particularly at Hommel's ability as a ball player. Then Hommel was said to have punched one of the Gootleman boys.

Police then took a hand in the affair and led the ball players away. While they were doing so one of the brothers attempted to hit Cy Perkins. At that a policeman placed him under arrest as well as his three brothers.

In court yesterday the brothers were discharged when the ball players failed to appear against them. Arthur Gootleman, however, swore out warrants against the four players.

College Star Signs

Jay Partridge
From honor student to a big league job is the rather unusual leap Jay Partridge, second baseman of the Oglethorpe University team, has just made. He's been signed by Brooklyn.

Partridge had an average of .93 in all studies during five terms. He was valedictorian of the senior class, vice president of the student body and secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school. He's a star ball player, too.

Puzzle Plays

THERE are runners on first and third and one out. The batsman hits a long fly in deep center field. The runner on third feels that he can easily beat a throw to the plate if the ball is caught and holds his base. The runner on first is certain the fielder will not make the catch and runs wild. The fielder catches the ball. The runner on third dashes for the plate the moment the ball strikes the fielder's hands. The runner, originally on first, is almost to third base when the ball is caught.

The center fielder throws the ball to the second baseman, who touches that base. The runner, originally on first, trying to regain that base after the catch, is still several yards from second on his way back when the ball is held on that base.

The second baseman then rolls the ball in the direction of the pitcher and the team in the field starts for the bench, believing the side has been retired. The baserunner continues back to first base.

Did the run count and was the side retired?

The Answer.
The side was not retired when the second baseman held the ball on that base in advance of the runner who was trying to return to first.

In order to retire the runner he must be touched with the ball or have the ball thrown to the base he occupied at the time of the hit, which in this case was first base.

The runner had a right to continue on to first after the ball had been rolled into the infield. He was safe at that base. The run, of course, counted.

Golf Winner Goes Back to School

NEW YORK, June 10.—(AP)—Pen and pencil displaced masher and muller for 17-year-old Marjorie O'Leary today. She had to return to high school at Englewood, N. J., for examinations after another triumph on the links.
