

FOUR AMERICAN LEAGUERS FACE FIGHTING CHARGE

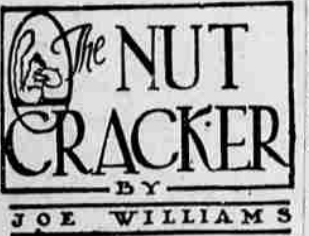

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—(AP)—Four members of the Philadelphia American league baseball club, Ed Rommel, Cy Perkins, Ira Thomas and Mickey Cochrane, are to appear in court today to answer charges of participating in what was described as a "free-for-all" fight during a boxing match at the Athletics baseball park Monday night.

The ball players were watching the bouts and in seats nearby sat four brothers named Gootlema. As the bouts progressed considerable banter was given back and forth on the capabilities of men in the ring. The repartee continued and then, it is said, one of Connie Mack's Athletics made a remark reflecting upon the necessity of the Gootlema's.

The Gootlema's were said to have resented the slur and retained with stronger character, aimed particularly at Rommel's ability as a ball player. Then Rommel was said to have punched one of the Gootlema's.

Police then took a hand in the affair and led the ball players away. While they were doing so one of the brothers attempted to hit Cy Perkins. At that a policeman placed him under arrest as well as his three brothers.

In court yesterday the brothers were discharged when the ball players failed to appear against them. Arthur Gootlema, however, swore out warrants against the four players.

The world moves on. The old-fashioned stage heroine used to lose her pearls for publicity purposes. The modern cinema queen barely eludes the vicious hands of kidnappers.

Mr. Dempsey says the favorite phrase of his wife is "Pay the man dead." Then it is not always the woman who pays and pays and pays?

That night at the opera. The flash and flame of color in the diamond horse shoe. The sweet and merriment of the distinguished crowd.

The enchanting charm of the symphonies. The dazzling beauty of Peritra.

I shall never forget it. That was the night my flask fell over the balcony rail.

That afternoon at Churchill Downs. Derby day. The cheering thousands. The moving spectacle of fashion.

College Star Signs

Jay Partridge From honor student to a big league job is the rather unusual leap Jay Partridge, second baseman of the Oglethorpe University team, has just made. He's been signed by Brooklyn.

Puzzle Plays

THERE are runners on first and third and one out. The batsman hits a long fly in deep center field. The runner on third feels that he can easily beat a throw to the plate if the ball is caught and holds his base.

The runner on first is certain the fielder would not make the catch and runs wild. The fielder catches the ball. The runner on third dashes for the plate.

The second baseman then rolls the ball in the direction of the pitcher and the team in the field starts for the bench, believing the side has been retired. The baserunner continues back to first base.

Did the run count and was the side retired?

The Answer. The side was not retired when the second baseman held the ball on that base in waiting for the runner who was trying to return to first.

In order to retire the runner he must be touched with the ball or have the ball thrown to the base he occupied at the time of the hit, which in this case was first base.

The runner had a right to continue on to first after the ball had been rolled into the infield. He was safe at that base. The run, of course, counted.
