GREETING PLANNED FOR AMUNDSEN AS HE REACHES OSLO

OSLO, Norway, June 20.—(AP)—Captain Roald Amundsen and his five fellow explorers will have an enthusiastic welcome when they arrive here, within the next few days, on their return from their perilous airplane expedition into the Arctic.

Though they failed in their main object, that of being the first to reach the north pole by air, their exploit in flying to a point within 150 miles of their goal, their survival amid untold hardships and their return to Spitzbergen in their remaining planes are regarded as being a wonderful feat.

Enthusiasm Grows.

With each succeeding report of the experiences of the fliers, the popular enthusiasm grows and it has already been expressed to some extent in the numerous wireless messages sent to the explorers, from the king, the government and their friends.

There is praise also for the heroism of Lincoln Ellsworth, American member of the expedition, who saved Leif Dietrichsen and Oskar Omdahl, when they fell through the ice.

Published non-copyright accounts of the fliers 'experiences say they encountered a fog soon after starting from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, on May 21. Rising above the mist, they held to their course for some hours, until compelled to alight because half their gasoline was exhausted. Then the ice closed in, immovably jamming both machines, but Amundsen and his companions proved equal to the emergency.

Plane Dislodged.

With the greatest of exertion, calling for every ounce of courage, muscle and determination, they succeeded in dislodging one of the planes, although, the effort cost 24 days of exhausting work, during which their rations were rapidly disappearing and the prospects of a safe return seemingly dwindling.

Courage and perserverance won through and at length, discarding all the equipment they could spare and with only enough gasoline and food to take them back—provided there was no further trouble—they entrusted themselves again to the air, heading for Spitzbergen.

Over the miles of dreary ice fields, without a trace of land, the plane flew southward, sometimes encountering the dreaded fog, always keeping on until the explorers were able to land safely on the shore of northeast land, part of the Spitzbergen archipelago.

Scarcely had the machine alighted when almost as if by arrangement, the Norwegian sailing boat, Sjoeliv hove into sight. The captain and crew of the little boat had heard the droning of the seaplane's engine several miles away, but supposed it belonged to the patrol expedition out to scan the wild coast for the missing explorers. The surprise and gratification of the hardy seamen when they discovered the mistake must have equaled that of the castaways, who thus saw salvation at hand. Captain Woolan speedily recognized Amundsen, nothwithstanding the month's growth of hair covering his usually clean shaven face and they exchanged cordial greetings.

The explorers were soon aboard and welcomed with the utmost hospitality, although the sudden addition of six hungry men made big demands on the Sjoeliv's small larder and there was not much to eat and drink but seal beef, eggs and cider.

grown daughters, both of them unmarried. One of the daughters has been teaching school in Arizona, the other daughter living with her parents in Kelso.

The family came to Kelso from Eugene, Oregon, where Dovery was engaged in newspaper work.

Mrs. Dovery said her husband carried several policies with life insurance companies but did not know the amounts.

Dovery was a retired major in the United States army. His son died in the World war.

Dovery spent his entire career in the newspaper and printing business. His first paper was The Shield, a weekly at Barron, Wis., about 1886. He next published a weekly at Worthington, Minn., about 1904. Along with Will Hornibrook, he founded, about 1910, the Chronicle, a weekly [illegible], Idaho. He sold out his interest there in 1918 on account of ill health, and rested two years. In 1920 he started a print shop in Eugene, Ore. He came to Kelso a year ago last November and bought the Cowlitz County News. He had two sisters, Mrs. John Garder, Lacrosse, Wis., and her sister in Norway and three brothers, Ed and Oscar in Alberta, Canada, and Ole, in Erskine, Minnesota.

Formerly Lived Here

Thomas Dovery lived here for a period of about a year, according to Robert C. Hall, superintendent of the University press at the University of Oregon, who knew him in a business way. He owned the Dovery printing company at 760 Willamette street now owned by Howard B. Freeland and known as the Eugene Printing company, leaving it about two years ago when he bought the Kelso newspaper. He owned property at 1310 Thirteenth avenue east, where Mrs. May B. Birne now resides.

"He seemed a very nice sort of fellow," said Mr. Hall, "a fine fellow—very quiet and not a person whom one would expect to make enemies.

Mr. Dovery was a member of the Episcopal church in Eugene, and was a clerk of the vestry of the church. He was also secretary of the Lane county democratic organization at the time of his residence here.

ENGINE DITCHED BY DEBRIS OF STORM IN EAST

This photograph shows the engine of the train in the ditch, after it had struck a switch filled with dirt and washed down the hillside near Hackettstown, N. J., during a heavy storm that raged while the train sped on its way. Officials are shown inspecting the wreckage and seeking those reported missing. The photograph was taken in New Jersey June 16, arrived in Eugene in time to be printed just four days later. The picture was taken by NEA Service.

NO DEFENSE DAY PARADE PLANNED

believing that the continuance of peace and the security of our country depends upon a spirit of patriotic American citizenship and an adequate preparation and willingness to defend our country from attack. It is understood that it does not bind me for future military service nor for any further service than that indicated in this enrollment form."

Taking the oath as a one-day volunteer will not interfere in any way with previous plans for the Fourth of July and will place no further obligation on those signing, it is announced.

The following requests have been received from the headquarters of the Oregon Defense Test committee at Camp Jackson, Medford:

"Enroll all women possible for service in the Army Nurse corps. Term and form of enlistment is the same as for men. The patriotic women of the state were responsible in a large degree for the success of the 1924 Defense Test. At The Dalles, the enrollment of women exceeded male enlistments, the total of both making a conspicuous record for that city.

"In order to meet the present situation, the general committee, with the approval of the governor, has ruled that the 46,000 citizens who enrolled for the 1924 Defense Test, be held in the service for Defense Test Day of this year. Any one-day volunteer, 1924, desiring to be relieved of this additional obligation, may do so by notifying the general committee in writing at any time prior to July 4. This action is necessitated by the emergency of having to secure the 30,000 names that are the basic requirement in manpower needed to fill to war strength all military units allotted to Oregon under a call similar to that in the World war."

Summer Contests Planned at Oregon

Students of the University summer session will take part in an extensive recreation program, that will include contests and matches in all forms of athletics, announces Dr. John F. Bovard, dean of the school of physical education. The first event will be a baseball game Tuesday evening, following a get-together of all students.

Both gymnasiums will be open every day, and swimming lessons will be given by Dwight French, director of the men's gymnasium, and by Miss Gertrude Tucker, in the Woman's building.

The university tennis courts are available at all hours. The university golf course will be the scene of several matches, and hikes will also be a prominent feature of the recreational program.

City Market Does Capacity Business

Another capacity day was reported for the Producers Public market today by W. A. Ayres, market master. All of the 96 stalls were filled and a number of dealers had space in the aisles. The opening of the new market which took place recently provides for the needs of the new market to a considerable extent, Mr. Ayres said today.

"If the new building was not finished we would have a hard time now providing space for the large number of producers demanding space," the market master states. With the approach of the canning season it is expected that there will be a big increase in the number of growers using the market.

RAIDING OFFICERS MIX IN DARKNESS

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 20.—(AP)—William F. Porter, a federal prohibition officer was shot and killed; W. E. Workmen, state officer was shot twice and seriously wounded, and George Ball, chief of state officers was wounded in a gun battle between federal and state officers on Camp Creek in Wayne county early today.

The battle started when federal and state officers, both approaching a still location from opposite sides mistook each other for moonshiners.

Homer Joy, another federal officer said he was sleeping on a hill overlooking the scene of suspected still when he heard shooting. He flashed his light and recognized Ball in the state forces, yelled to the men to stop shooting, but could not be heard above the din.

Porter had thrown F. J. Poe, a state officer to the ground and was grappling with him, Joy said. Porter was believed to have recognized Poe and started to let him up before Poe also had recognized him. Then, Joy said, Poe fired and Porter fell. Joy covered Poe with his gun and ordered him to disarm before Poe realized that he was fighting fellow officers.

Poe was arrested on a homicide charge and committed to the county jail when he appeared at the hospital to see Workman and Ball. Physicians held little hope for their recovery.

HILL LINES PLAN FOR EXTENSION

surveyed at the same time and one is now nearing completion, we do not think it necessary to make a wasteful duplication. If the Oregon Trunk extends to Klamath Falls, it would have a terminal there with necessary round house and shop facilities.

"My idea about joint use of the line south of Klamath Falls, would be the same as north, in the event a line is necessary to Susanville, Cal., or in that vicinity, and it would surely be wasteful there to construct two railroads."

"Summer Sun" is To be Published

The "Summer Sun," official newspaper of the Portland and Eugene sessions of the University of Oregon summer school, will make its first appearance Monday afternoon, announces Ralph D. Casey, professor of journalism, who will have charge of Eugene classes in newswriting and feature writing.

Material for the publication will be selected from work of the classes here and in Portland. An editorial board composed of Ralph D. Casey and Inez King, of Eugene, and Alfred Powers and Miss Margaret Sharp of Portland, has been selected to edit the paper.

"The Summer Sun" will be issued weekly during the term, and will be sent to all summer school students.

Up to late this afternoon the slander suit of Brown versus Peterson was still under way in circuit court after three days hearing. It was not expected that it would go to the jury today. Other civil cases on the docket that are slated for next week are Powell versus Anderson, Anderson versus McDougal and Taylor versus Hill.

The grand jury brought in an indictment yesterday against Mark Brooks for setting up a distillery. An indictment was also brought in against P. M. Swank charged with larceny of an automobile. The grand jury was dismissed until recalled by the court.

EXTRA SESSION HELD IN COURT

journment over Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

Investigations Made

Dr. Tonney admitted that after newspapers published the confession of Faiman in which he said he had obtained from the city health department laboratories three test tubes of typhoid germs which he passed on to Shepherd and taught him how to use in destroying Billy McClintock, two investigations of possible leaks at the laboratory were made by Dr. Herman Bundesen, head of the city health department, and Dr. Tonney.

The doctor also admitted that he understood that Faiman's school had been licensed by Dr. Bundesen to conduct a hospital, a fact which would have influenced him in handing out germs from the laboratory.

Attack Resumed

The defense resumed its attack today upon the testimony of Miss Isabelle Pope, who waited with a marriage license while McClintock died of typhoid fever.

Frederic T. Squibb, shorthand reporter, who recorded a portion of Miss Pope's testimony before the coroner's jury which held Shepherd for the murder of the rich youth, testified that the young woman had not mentioned "germs" or "study of germs."

On the witness stand against Shepherd she said the defendant had informed her he had studied "typhoid and germs."

A sentence of $350 and 30 days in the county jail was given to Neil Edwards in justice court this afternoon, after Edwards had pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing beer.

Mrs. Edwards, his wife, pleaded guilty to a similar charge, and was fined $250. The couple were arrested by city police at a downtown rooming house last night, and turned over to the county today.

Price, superintendent of schools at Enid, Oklahoma; "Socialization Problems in High Schools," led by Dean Marion Brown, university high school, Oakland, California; "The Research Bureau and School Efficiency," led by R. W. DeBoak, professor of education.

The program will be concluded by W. F. Kennedy, director of platoon schools for Pittsburgh, who will talk on "Plans for Administrative Reorganization."

CHANGES NOTED ON FAMED DRIVE WITH NEW HOMES RISING

NEW YORK, June 20.—Riverside Drive is losing another grand old mansion in the rush of skyscraper buildings—the Potter home on the northeast corner at 89th street.

It will make way for a fourteen-story apartment the cover the block front, constructed by Anthony Campagna. It was built in 1898 by Mrs. Alfred Corning Clark at a cost of $1,000,000, an unusual price for a private residence in those days. She was the widow of Edward Clark, one of the founders of the Singer Sewing Machine company and a noted philanthropist. She married the Right Rev. Henry Codman Potter, Bishop of New York, prominent for his work in behalf of the poor, who first projected the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Business Encroaches

When in the late nineties business began to encroach on the quiet of Mrs. Clark's residence on 21st street, she decided to build on Riverside Drive. Ernest Flagg, architect of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, the United States Naval Academy, Singer building and many other public and private structures, was instructed to design her new home as nearly as possible like the old one, so that she wouldn't know that she moved. It was done—with variations, the rooms specially arranged for her furniture, even wallpaper of the old dwelling reproduced, on an irregular plot, 140x175, the house itself, 70x80. In style it was simply modern, but with decided French accent, in red brick, lavishly trimmed with white hand-carved granite around the many windows, balustrades of roof, cornice and the portico. Fine iron work railings embellished second story windows, with grilles at the entrance a fence surrounding the plot alone said to have cost $60,000. The roof was copper.

Bowling Alley Built

A wing was a conservatory, with long arm shooting off diagonally as a bowling alley. On the ground floor was a hall 18 feet wide, flanked by drawing room and library, both 22x65, with ceilings 18 feet high, a large dining room and a smoking room taking the rest of the space.

When Abram S. Hewett heard that Bishop Potter was to marry Mrs. Clark, he told him; "You're going to lie in the finest house in New York."

To honor the site, Builder Campagna has commissioned J. E. R. Carpenter, architect, to design a monumental structure—one of the finest examples of modern planning and construction in the city. With completion of the new park and boulevard over the New York Central Railroad, its location opposite the Soldiers' monument will be very desirable. It will contain suites of six to eleven large rooms, some of four and five rooms. Wings along 89th and 90th streets imposing a garden court will give unusual light and air.

REGENTS RAPPED BY FACULTY MEN

lems of individual justice here of course, but in terms of merely general policy the board's action is an emphatically serious one, carrying far reaching implications."

"Not only has the morale of the staff on the grounds been greatly impaired, as is evidenced by the readiness with which they are weighing suggestions of going elsewhere, but we have been heard of through the length and breadth of the country, and worthwhile persons, to whom we are submitting proposals to come and take the vacant places are returning us short and unhesitating negatives.

"Matters will not be improved when our situation comes before the American Association of University Professors, as it is bound to do, and when we get the full limelight of nation-wide publicity.

"The University of Oregon at best is at a disadvantage in trying to get and hold high-class men. Salaries are low, we are far away from centers of scientific activity, and the university is not able to pay our way even to the big annual meetings of various scientific groups and associations; whereas such compensations of the academic career as sabatical years, retirement allowances, and the rest have none of them as yet arrived with us.

"If the professoriate and all training schools for the professoriate throughout America, come to believe that even tenure is precarious with us, being subject to the unchallengable discretion of the board of regents, it is easy to guess what the effect on faculty efficiency at Oregon is likely to be."

It was stated afterwards that the shooting was not a political crime and had no connection with the general strike which is planned against Japanese, British and American employers.

American consul today again issued an appeal that all women and children be removed from Canton fearing serious trouble after the strike starts.

Andrews' reports were made to an Erie man whose financial assistance did much to make the expedition possible. The man, whose name cannot be disclosed, died recently and the reports are being received by others interested in the expedition.

The exposition is conducting a search for dinosaur eggs and traces of human evolution. The plans called for the penetration of the region south of the Altai mountains, a district which has never before been explored.

"We will work west of Chagan Nor (White Lake), along the northern base of the Altais, as well as to the south. This will bring us to the home of the wild camels and wild horses and I hope we can bring back specimens of both," Andrews says.
