

DAYTON WILL HAVE EVERYTHING READY FOR 'MONKEY' TRIAL

DAYTON, Tenn., June 30.—While defense attorneys in northern cities worked on the legal phase of the Scopes evolution case and other persons debated its educational significance, Dayton went ahead today making plans to meet the physical wants of the thousands expected to attend the trial of the Tennessee school teacher here beginning July 10.

A big house on a hill is being prepared for the residence of attorneys who will come from many places to defend John T. Scopes against the charge that he taught evolution in a public school. This commodious dwelling, 18 rooms, may be used also to care for expert witnesses, of whom a score or more are looked for.

Engineers from New Orleans were surveying the situation today with a view of erecting a large auditorium, it is reported, with amplifiers.

Dr. John R. Neal, chief counsel for Mr. Scopes was in New York today, presumably to confer with witnesses for the accused.

In Chicago where he conferred yesterday with Clarence Harrow and Dudley Field Malone, his associates in the case, Mr. Neal expressed himself as seeing a broad significance in the movement behind the coming trial. "This case has more local significance," the defense of the teacher is quoted. "One is amazed at the extent of latent sentiment of intolerance and bigotry in other states."

If the state's charges against Scopes are sustained, it will be the first evolution trial and perhaps a movement in congress to control the thought as well as the actions of the people.

A local fair occurred yesterday when a reporter, said to have declared that he would write what he pleased about the Scopes case, was arrested, given a hearing and fined $2 and costs on a charge of using profanity in a public place.

QUAKE SHOCK VIEW TOLD BY DR. HODGE

ing to the theory, which in turn caused the Labrador tremors, and the action resulted in the Montana activity. This was transferred to the point near Santa Barbara. Another earthquake was predicted by Dr. Hodge, though the time and place, before even a guest can be made, will have to be surmised by extensive study.

There is little or no possibility of an earthquake damaging Oregon, said Dr. Hodge. Oregon lies between two earthquake zones, one to the north, which veers off in two angles, one to the southwest, and the other to the southeast and the other zone to the south, which swings out to the northwest at a point not far from San Francisco. Oregon lies in what Dr. Hodge describes as a submerged area, with no faults liable to quake activity.

Seismograph is Urged
Dr. Hodge pointed out the fact, however, that a seismograph located in Oregon would be of immense scientific value in determining the paths of earth tremors resulting in earthquakes. An instrument could detect waves passing from the northern area which might result in shifts causing quakes in the southern area, Dr. Hodge declares.

Dr. Hodge has studied the coast area in regard to relation of earthquakes and the consequent results, and bases these theories on his investigations.

word that his father's condition was critical.

Dr. James F. Compal, the president's physician, remained here to attend Colonel Coolidge until all danger of a relapse is passed. He advised the president, however, that his father was making a remarkable recovery, in view of his age and weakened heart and that there was little likelihood of a relapse.

Visiting the sick room before his departure, the president found his father, who submitted to an operation Sunday, sitting up in an excellent spirits. The 80-year-old patient insisted that he would be all right again in a day or two, and told his son and daughter-in-law not to worry about him.

John, son of the president and Mrs. Coolidge, remained here to be with his grandfather and do the chores around the place. Before leaving the president took a last look at the ailing he was stacking, and gave his some instructions about work he thought should be done.

Before making his departure, the president and Mrs. Coolidge visited the cemetery where their young son, Calvin, was buried just a year ago.

BANKERS CALL FOR HELP FROM NATION

threw a network of patrols over the business district during the dark hours.

Guadalupe Catholic church was said to have been one of the principal sufferers. Here, the police report said, the altar vessels of gold and silver were stolen.

Two supposed thieves were surprised in the ruins of the Arlington hotel, but they managed to evade arrest. Other minor cases of theft also were reported, including pilfering from the shops along the water front.

The night and early morning were marked by two severe tremors which again rocked the city at 1:22 and 4:30 a. m. The first of these brought down one of the remaining chimneys of the Arlington hotel and also completed the wrecking of a couple of small brick buildings which had been badly damaged in the quake of Monday morning.

As the hotel chimney came crashing down where wrecking crews were clearing the debris, the shouts of searchers sought safety in flight, but returned to their labor almost before the dust of the smash had cleared away.

Bodies are Recovered
Before dawn they had recovered two of the bodies for which they were searching, those of Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, 83-year-old millionaire widow of Burlington, Iowa, and Bertram B. Hancock, 21-year-old son of G. Allen Hancock, wealthy realtor operator of Los Angeles.

During the night upwards of 200 uniformed police arrived from Los Angeles to aid the local militia in patrolling the streets, which were cordoned from sunset to sunrise. Shortly after four o'clock the battleship Arkansas, Captain Frank Lyons commanding, dropped anchor in the harbor and began landing shore parties of blue-jackets to aid in maintaining order.

Assistance is Sent
Other assistance also came from Los Angeles, including a trainload of supplies, several trucks of fire apparatus and a powerful electric generator and portable lights from the famous Players-Lankay studio at Hollywood, which was used to illuminate the ruins which were being combed for bodies of possible victims.

The landing of the force from the U. S. S. Arkansas, was a signal for the reorganization of the guards about the quake-ravaged city. Thirty-five members of the ship's company came ashore at daybreak, among them a land radio outfit in command of Radio Gunner C. S. Denton, who immediately established a plant for communication between the shore forces and Captain Frank Lyons, commanding the battleship. Naval officers estimated that a battalion of blue-jackets would be ashore and in major command of the guard duties before noon.

They will be under command of Lieutenant-Commander H. B. Sampson.

Guard is Organized
Chief of Police Desvanderclump, of Santa Barbara, announced that the police and sheriff's forces of Santa Barbara and Los Angeles combined, numbering about 450 men, would be reorganized for more efficient guard duty at once. Some cases of looting were reported during the night.

At daylight a unit of Red Cross nurses and rehabilitation experts arrived from San Francisco under the direction of J. W. Richardson, relief organizer, and Dorothy Lydarby, director of nursing activities in the Pacific division of the Red Cross.

Announcements were made that a meeting of all Red Cross workers in the stricken area would be held at once to plan a more efficient relief organization.

The battleship Arkansas experienced some difficulty in feeling her way into the harbor before daylight when her navigating officers strained their eyes to locate the Santa Barbara light. The lighthouse had been cut down by the quake.

Slides are Reported
Teachers coming into the city this morning, reported heavy landslides across the highway fifteen miles north of here in the direction of Paradise Camp, in the Santa Ynez valley. They said, however, that no other damage had occurred to that section.

In this territory is the Gibraltar dam, source of Santa Barbara's water supply, which earlier reports yesterday said had been demolished, but which was found later to be intact.

The total of bodies recovered this morning from the ruins stood at eight. They were:

Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, Burlington, Iowa; Bertram B. Hancock, Los Angeles; Dr. James C. Angle, Santa Barbara; William Proctor, Santa Barbara; Merced Lewis, Santa Barbara; Penelope Stovis, Santa Barbara; Marianne Minesside, Santa Barbara.

Services for Mrs. Perkins will be held here today. The body will be sent to Roseville cemetery, Los Angeles, where it will be cremated.

Another victim was added to the fatality list today when the mission fathers reported the death of John finest structures in the city, was a paradox of stability and ruin. The center caved in when the earth waves struck the community. The wings stood, apparently intact, but close survey showed them to be badly cracked and tilted.

DEBRIS SCATTERED AT SANTA BARBARA

The brand new California hotel, a hostelry of 100 rooms completed within the week, was a total wreck. The roof had collapsed in several places and throughout its entire height one corner had been ripped bare, exposing the beds as they stood prepared for guests, careening at a dizzy angle and threatening at any moment to skid out into the brick littered street.

Another comparatively new hotel, the Carillo, two large wings of filled concrete construction was badly shaken in its two lowest floors, but above that the walls seemed to be as good as new. The interior furnishings, however, all showed the mark of the tremor.

Pavement is Cracked
Here and there throughout the downtown section, the pavement bucked and cracked, while in some locations it had been slashed and chipped into fragments a foot square by the grinding force of the successive tremors.

In the older and less pretentious residential districts the earthquake had played queer pranks with the wooden homes built a quarter and half a century ago. One sagged crazily in front, its gable hanging two feet nearer the road than its foundation posts. Another had buckled in the middle and peered at the passing world through bay windows which until yesterday had been sheltered from the summer sun by an old fashioned veranda.

Immediately next door was a little home of two stories which looked much weaker in build than its neighbor, but here not a bit of damage had been done except to the chimney cap which had been catapulted into a bed of roses. Torrents from broken water mains had rushed through a number of home tracts, burying gardens and sidewalks under a paper of mud several inches thick.

Many Homes Wrecked
Nowhere, or only in very rare instances did the men, women and children of Santa Barbara spend last night within doors. Many whose homes were wrecked were forced to bed down in the open under the segment moon. The remainder slept on their lawns from choice, not knowing when a fresh earth tremor might bring their ceilings down about their heads.

Two facts stood out from many striking features in this city today. One was the continued determination of each and every citizen to face his destiny and their duty and the other was the absence of any serious fire, which in earthquakes elsewhere had added to the horrors of stricken communities.

Early today the lending bankers and business men of Santa Barbara plan to meet in general session and outline the re-construction. Last night they started the program by raising $10,000 in ten minutes at a hastily summoned assembly to finance the clearing away of the wreckage.

ed by the legislature, and provided that the election be called in event the referendum were invoked against any of the revenue producing acts of the legislature, in which event all measures referred to the people by the legislature itself also would be voted on except the eastern Oregon normal school bill. The referendum was invoked on the tobacco bill, the bus bill and the fishing bill, but the governor had vetoed the special election act, so that operation of all these measures is now held up pending the general election in November, 1926.

TRIP TO CRATER LAKE IS STOPPED TO SAVE TROOPS

Eugene national guardsmen resent the assertion published by Company "F" members in Salem newspapers that the reason none of the troops national guard were able to visit Crater Lake during the recent summer camp was due to "hanging" on the part of Adjutant General George A. White or his staff.

This statement is made by Lieutenant Virgil Wood of Company "C" of Eugene, who declares that the Crater Lake trip was called off to save the men a grueling hike through 11 miles of snow and slush they would have faced then on completely on the eve of the 82nd brigade review.

"The men enjoyed the trip to Klamath Falls just the same," says Lieutenant Wood. The decision to change the itinerary was made at a meeting of officers at Union Creek below Crater Lake. General White had ordered the trip with the hope that the automobiles could take the men closer than 5 1/2 miles of the lake. But when it was definitely found to be impossible he called the officers meeting and it was decided to make the Klamath Falls tour instead.

"If Company F's officers were at that meeting they would know how it came that the trip was called off. If they were not, they are mighty poor soldiers to make the trip to the lake against orders—some 60 or 70 of them, according to newspaper reports—and then go back to Salem and make the unfair accusation that General White had full knowledge that the troops would never get to Crater Lake, and had bulldozed drivers in going to Klamath Falls instead."

Eugene guardsmen were disappointed in not getting to Crater Lake, according to Lieutenant Wood, but no word of criticism of General White in connection with the trip being called off has been heard here. In fact, the men were glad to have gone on to Klamath Falls rather than to have turned back and returned to camp.

BRIEF NEWS ITEMS ABOUT QUAKE AREA

It is found of the Arlington hotel. "It just took the hotel that we considered strong as a fortress and shook it back and forth as if it were a rag."

Father Englebrecht, an aged invalid priest, was being carried down the stairway of the historic old mission by a companion, Father Augusten. With the second shock they fell through a new hole in the floor below. Neither was injured.

The Santa Barbara Daily News, the Associated Press afternoon paper, despite the lack of power, issued a small extra three hours after the first shock hit Santa Barbara.

The Standard Oil company gasoline storage tanks at Santa Barbara burst and the earthquake area was partially covered with the oil. The area was roped off because of the hazard.

Telegraph companies held large extra forces in service at San Francisco and Los Angeles, last night to move thousands of messages which deluged in from eastern points to the Santa Barbara earthquake stricken region. The messages were principally inquiries regarding the safety of friends and relatives.

INGROWN NAIL
Turns Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night. "Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

SEIZURE LAW GETS VERDICT IN COURTS

SALEM, Ore., June 30.—The presence of Justice H. H. Belt on the Oregon supreme court bench resulted in the court today reversing its former opinion of January 2, written by former Justice M. L. Pipes, and upholding the lower court for Benton county in the conviction of F. A. McDaniel on a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor. The case is considered crucial.

The right of search and seizure prior to arrest, and to use evidence so obtained were mainly involved in the case. The opinion of Justice Belt handed down today, affirms Judge G. F. Skipworth of the lower court.

The court holds, through the Belt opinion, that the officers, from personal knowledge through the senses of sight and smell, had the right to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant had intoxicating liquor in his possession and that he was attempting to drive an automobile while in a drunken condition. Without doubt, it is held, he was committing a crime in their presence, for which they had the legal right to make arrest without a warrant, and the right of search followed as an incident thereto.
