CARROTS HIGHER AT PUBLIC MART

The only change in retail prices at the Producers Public market Thursday was a half-cent advance on sack carrots, both in small and large lots. In small lots the carrots are now selling at 2½ cents and for large lots, 2 cents. The change has been looked for for about a week, due to it being so late in the season, making a shortage, and because the recent cold spell made it difficult to get the carrots out of the ground.

Thursday was rather a quiet day at the market. Apples continued plentiful. Best grades of Yellow Newtowns were up to $1.50 a box. Jonathans and Spitzenbergs continued at around $1 for good grades.

More of the early rhubarb, hothouse grown, was in Thursday. The price continues at 15 cents a pound, retail.

A few pumpkins and squash continue to come in. Dried prunes were more in evidence Thursday, too.

At stall 80 was a fine display of dressed rabbits Thursday.

Best cabbage is selling for 5 cents a pound. Second stuff is going at 4 cents. Cabbage is very scarce now.

Potatoes continued unchanged at $1.25 a hundred Thursday.

Weekly Report on Vegetable Mart

The weekly market report sent out by the United States Bureau of Agricultural economics from the Portland office for this district devotes considerable space to vegetables this week.

Parsnips continue in very light supply in the market, the growers having plants but being unable to dig them during the cold weather, the report says. Cauliflower is reported very firm.

The potato market seems to be about where it was when the cold weather started. Warehouse stocks are reported nearly cleaned up in Yakima.

Holdings of potatoes are reported shorter than a year ago, but Idaho has been shipping generously into California markets, possibly enough to make up any deficiency on the coast. Lettuce and tomato prices are reported working upwards.

WHEAT CONFERENCE IS FOUND VALUABLE

A very important and very interesting meeting was that of the Columbia Basin Wheat conference at Arlington the past week, says Seymour Jones, state market agent, in his weekly bulletin. Representatives from eleven eastern Oregon counties, from Oregon State college, from the Federal Bureau of Agricultural economics, and the state market agent and grain inspection department attended.

All these elements were there in dead earnest to unite for the betterment of conditions—in the means of production; in eradicating annoying influences; in securing better means of transportation, with consequent reduction in freight rates; in establishing the best possible means of marketing, and in securing reliable market information daily for the regions remote from the centers where markets are controlled, Mr. Jones says.

The meeting was remarkable for the intelligence of those attending and the ready knowledge they possessed and could pleasantly express regarding the existing situation and the things necessary for its improvement, the report says.

A resolution was adopted expressing satisfaction with state grain inspection, also for tightening up the laws and regulations regarding warehousing.

A feverish spurt in wheat prices in Chicago early last week collapsed toward the close and quotations are now about as they have been, with some promise of early movement for export, Mr. Jones reports.
