Woman's Day

By ALLENE SUMMER

A WORLD WAR veteran of British Columbia, unable to get work, was helping with the family washing. His tie caught in the wringer and he was strangled to death.

Not only does it seem ironic that a man could escape unscathed from a war and then die in this way, but some figures from various insurance companies to the effect that many more fatalities occur from just such unexpected little things about the house than in any so-called place of "hazardous employment," seem ironic, especially in light of the fact that very few housewives carry insurance or are credited as doing very important or "hazardous" work.

BEAUTY OF UNIVERSE

It will be interesting to see what becomes of Miss Louise Golgarbeiter of Austria, recently selected as The Most Beautiful Girl in the Universe. (One wonders how they found about the girls of Mars, but let that pass).

We have a theory that if a girl has beauty she needs nothing else, and yet a roll call of selected beauties of recent years proves, too, that beauty still brings its troubles as it did to Helen and Cleo of old.

Still, most of us would take a chance on the troubles in such a cause!

* * *

MONEYED TRAGEDY

Most of our love tragedies center about the fact that either the boy or girl is poor and of humble parentage, and the other a favored member of society.

But the love tragedy of Miss Ruth Wilson and her fiancee, Horace Roberts, Jr., of Moorestown, N. J., centers about two young people to the manor born. The murder-suicide theory to explain the two young people found dying in the girl's home was changed to a double murder theory, and one broken engagement after another seems to have preceded the tragedy.

Sometimes life remains at too smooth a level and more trouble comes than when it has its high and low spots.

MALE COOK BOOK

It took a man to get up a cook book of all the things that can be cooked without pots and pans. The book is called "Jack Knife Cookery," by James Wilder. He tells how to make cranberry or apple pie without pan, and all sorts of stews to be cooked in leaves or cocoanut shells. The author's life as a wandered and explorer made him find out how to do these things. Now he tells the world.

After all, we are learning more and more that the realm of cooking is not a woman's province solely, and that most of the real "finds" in this realm have been by men.

JUST LET 'EM DARE!

Speaking of cooking, have you heard of the famous French club of gourmets, called the Club des Cents? Each member has to prove that he really knows good food and drink before he can join the famous old club. The club gives occasional dinners at a restaurant which it deems worthy of its patronage. It may be an obscure little place made famous overnight by the tribute paid it by the gourmands.

Imagine any American body of men daring form such an association! American husbands, willy-nilly, are forced by American wives into the great national game of dieting. They may laud the vitamin, but never the trussed and ruffled fowl. We apologize for food in this land, never laud it.

If the liquor from pickled peaches is saved it can be used to advantage in mince pies or sauces.

Creamed butter added to honey that has been whipped makes a good syrup to use on waffles.

TODAY'S RECIPE

By SISTER MARY

By SISTER MARY
(NEA Service Writer)

ALTHOUGH fresh peaches lack some of the valuable mineral salts found in apples, they have a decided tonic effect and a definite place among the necessary fruits. Use them often while in season.

Small children cannot be allowed to eat uncooked peaches as they do apples, for the structure of the fruit is not as digestible as the apple. But when the fruit is stewed and used with rice or tapioca, children five or six years of age may be given the dessert.

A delicate tartness developed in cooking makes peaches particularly satisfactory with rice or tapioca. A pudding of this sort precludes the use of potatoes in a meal and provides a welcome change. These desserts should finish a light luncheon or dinner.

Peach cobbler is a simple, old time dessert, economical and "filling."

Peach Cobbler

Six peaches, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter. For batter—One cup of flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 egg yolk, water to make soft dough. Meringue—One egg white, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon water.

Pare and slice peaches and put into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter. Add four tablespoons water, cover and simmer while making dough. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Rub in butter with tips of fingers. Beat egg yolk with one-quarter cup water and cut into dry mixture with a knife. Add more water to make as soft a dough as necessary. Spread over peaches and bake 25 minutes in a hot oven. Remove from oven and turn up-side-down on a deep pie dish. Cover with meringue. It will take about eight minutes.

To make the meringue, beat white of egg with cold water on a platter with a wire whisk. Beat until stiff. Beat in one tablespoonful of sugar and fold in remaining two.

M. E. Aid Plans Annual Meet Tuesday

Annual reports will be given from the ten divisions and a nominating committee named. Officers will be elected at the September meeting. Mrs. A. E. Edblom is the retiring president.

Baptist Women To Conduct Booth At Fair

Alpha circle of the union met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. E. Seymour for a silver tea, about thirty attending. Mrs. Frank Needham was in charge of the program, Mrs. A. B. Serfling being in general charge for the afternoon's event. Mrs. Needham led devotions on "Hands," and read the "Universal Hymn."

A number of members assisted at the tea hour. The tea table was attractively set with asters in various shades and with pink candles.

The next regular meeting of the circle is to come on the second Tuesday in September.

Your Children

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A TIRED child will do all sorts of things that he'd never dream of doing when he's fresh and rested. Tired nerves are responsible.

A wise teacher knows this and makes allowance for the restlessness and fussing that goes on during the last querter of the afternoon session. Wise mothers know it too, and watch for the signs.

On long hot summer afternoons especially, little active bodies are apt to play out, and that is the time they should be separated from companions, taken indoors, or off by themselves in a cool shady place and made to rest.

Children are different from adults. They don't seem to feel fatigue and go on playing and tearing around nd giving the grown-ups the impression that they aren't a bit tired, when they are practically worn out.

The Wonder of Nerves

Nerves are sueer things. We have in our bodies a sort of storage battery called nerve energy. When this is used up, nature turns on an emergency battery called reserve energy.

When we feel tired, we don't have to stop working that minute because as long as the reserve battery holds out we can keep on going.

But it is a bad thing to keep on going until we're "ready to drop." That means we have pushed ourselves to the breaking point and there is no more reserve left. The only thing left then is rest or collapse.

Children will use up their reserve, however, without any conscious feeling of fatigue. But nature throws out a barrage of warning. A mother usually knows the signs. One of them is excessive irritability.

Children who play together peacefully an dby and then suddenly trouble starts. That means that one or very likely the whole crowd should be stopping to rest.

Need In-between Meal

Another thing—little children playing strenuously out in the open all day long cannot go from meal time to meal time without some light extra food. They seldom eat much at one sitting to begin with, and anyhow the three-meals-a-day program is a man made law for man. How do we know that it is suitable for children too?

Milk and simple little cookies or crackers and certain fruits or fruit juices are excellent for the in-between meal.

When children get too tired and too hungry they are not fit to digest a heavy meal. That is accountable for many summer stomach upsets. Another thing to look out for in little children is too much green corn. Scraped off the cob and made into custards is the best way to prepare it for them.

FINE FLAVORS BRING JOY TO EATING

Sugar is the Greatest Condimental Food in the World

Flavor! How much that means to all growing children and to all adults who enjoy their meals. What delight flavor brings to the palate. What satisfaction to a jaded appetite. And what flavor surpasses the unique sweetness of sugar?

The sentences above were not spoken, as might be supposed, by a great chef or even by a successful woman cook. They are the words of an eminent scientist, spoken while he was discussing the subject of sugar and diet.

Dieticians, medical specialists and scientific authorities all emphasize the importance of a varied, balanced diet. And how many of the useful foods are practically tasteless. How many worth-while foods, if taken "straight," would be so monotonous that we would soon tire of them. This is where sugar enters the domain of the healthful diet. A pinch of sugar used in the cooking of vegetables (preferably cooked with little water) makes these important foods fresher, more colorful and more delightful to the taste. A dash of sugar makes the eating of fruits and cereals a positive pleasure.

The well-informed woman uses correct amounts of sugar in making milk desserts — junkets, custards, puddings, etc.—thus helping her family to eat the needed quantity of milk. Remember stewed fruits, cakes and cookies and ice cream for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

By MARY JORDAN

ANOTHER personal problem!

* * *

Dear Mrs. Jordan:

How can I find out if my "man" is true to me. I am a bit suspicious of him, but don't really know. I want to know before I fall too deeply in love with him and marry him. I've known him three years, and don't know one thing about him in any way. NELL.

Answer:

If you have a father or a brother, either might assist you in "getting a line" on this elusive gentleman. You are very wise not to consider marriage on so slight a knowledge of the other person's background. Too many girls give less attention to picking out a bridegroom than they do in choosing their wedding dresses, and too many men marry with the casualness of going out and buying a sandwich. It can scarcely help but cause unhappiness later on when backgrounds are too meager or practically non-existent.

More discrimination and less divorce would create greater happiness for people if they but knew it. And I would urge you not to risk marriage with a man who is still a "stranger."

Time after time girls write to me after marriage and say that they have just learned "thus and so" about Mr. Husband, which they should have found out before marriage. But just as often they have been afraid to put the man to the test of time and have jumped into matrimony at the earliest opportunity.
