HOW HARRISBURG NAMED

INTERESTING STORY TOLD BY T. J. PLASTER
HARRISBURG, Ore., March 1.—(Special to the Register)—An interesting story of how Harrisburg likely got its name was told here last Saturday by T. J. Plaster, while he was here in company with his wife visiting at the Jack Goodman home in the country. Mr. Goodman being Mr. Plaster's nephew. It happens that Mr. Plaster was an early pioneer of this vicinity living in the foothills east of here from 1848 until in 1881 when he moved to town here and resided for a few years.
Mr. Plaster is now 77 years of age and he remembers the time when this place was known as Thurston, which with the Thurston in the family name, made two towns of this name in Oregon, so Mr. Plaster says. He remembers the town meeting that was called when this place became known and the people wanted to select a new name for the place.
It is the belief of the pioneer visitor that the town's name was finally chosen from a family living here by the name of Harris, and also that it was named after Harrisburg, Pa., due to the fact that at that time several Pennsylvania families resided in this section.

DAIRY CATTLE INFECTED

COWS OWNED BY GEO. MCCART FOUND TUBERCULAR

HARRISBURG, Ore., March 1.—(Special to the Register)—A state inspector for tuberculosis among cattle was in this vicinity Monday and tested out the cattle on the big dairy farm of Geo. A. McCart, situated east of the city. The inspector found 19 head of McCart's best full blood Holstein cattle infected with the disease. This was a complete surprise to Mr. McCart as he had never had the least suspicion that any of the cattle on his big dairy were victims of the disease. In accordance with the law the diseased cattle will be shipped to the inspection headquarters for this purpose, located at Portland, where a final inspection will be made.
In the event that in this examination the cattle should not be found to be carrying the tuberculosis germs they will be immediately sent back to the McCart dairy, but should this test also prove that the cattle really were tubercular, then they will accordingly be disposed of according to law, and Mr. McCart will receive a certain per cent of their actual value.

DAILY MARKET REPORT

ORRISON JOURNAL MARKET SERVICE
PORTLAND, Ore., March 5.—With a lower price level generally shown of late for butter at leading American centers, the situation in the Pacific Northwest is not so favorable. Even though no price changes are noted, either for cubes or prints during the day, there is a general trend toward very conservative buying. Purchases in this territory are of hand-to-mouth character, all interests expressing the opinion that the period is at hand when butter values should soften somewhat.
EGG TRADE SHOWS AN UPLIFT
Because of the competition among buyers the price of eggs here ruled firmer for the week's opening, the association quoting a rise of 1c which became effective. Buyers are paying 1c to 2c above the previous bids.

PROVISION PRICES ARE HIGHER

Local packers announce advances of 1c in all hams and in standard bacon, while both lard and compound are up 1/2c a pound. Practically no changes are quoted for fresh meats by packers. Lambs are scarce.
SELECTED POTATOES ARRIVING
Carload of Yakima potatoes packed in 50-pound crates, each potato wrapped and selected, was reported in by Bell & Co. during the day. The stock was priced at $1. This follows the recent arrival of world-beating Deschutes Gem, also packed in crates.

SUGAR ADVANCE IS IN EFFECT

Advance of 20c per hundred pounds named last Friday by refining interests, went into effect in the Portland territory at the week's opening. The new list on cane granulated is $10 to retailers.
FIRST CAR ROSEBURG BROCCOLI
First carload of Roseburg broccoli of the season made its appearance here for the week's opening. Because of the flooding of the market by junky California stock the price of best Roseburg was reduced to $2. California stock held at $1.25 to $1.75 per crate, few beyond $1.50.
