Hagen in Running for Britain's Golf Trophy American Just One Stroke Behind Two Britishers

HAGEN—2 (By the Associated Press) Britons are fearful tonight over the possibility that their long lost open golf championship trophy is going to start back to America tomorrow for the third successive season. Walter Hagen who carried it over the Atlantic last year to the United States, is threatening in a most impressive way to do it again. Tonight, with half of the struggle over, he stands just one stroke behind two British players who are tied for first place.

The leaders, C. A. Whitcombe and Arthur Havers, each covered the two rounds in 148 strokes, while Hagen took 147.

Hagen fails there are two others who still have a chance to take the cup to America. One is the Australian champion, Joe Kirkwood, who resides in the United States, and the other is Johnny Farrell of New York, who, however, is considered something of an outsider. Kirkwood scored 150 and Farrell 152 over the 36 holes. Between Kirkwood and Hagen only two names show on the record of today's playing—Gordon Lockhart, with 149, and Robert Scott, with 150.

MacDonald Smith of California, still has a chance to win the cup but it is a woefully weak one. He got an ugly 80 on the morning card, and though he played a flawless game after lunch, he could do not better than 75.
