"My little girl was troubled with ringworms on her face. They started in small, round spots about as large as a pea and the skin would crack and peel off. The ringworms were very irritating and annoying and she was very restless. I tried other remedies but they did not cure her. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in about four weeks she was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Alice A. Reid, R. R. 3, Box 125, Three Oaks, Mich.

IMPROVEMENT IS SEEN IN NAVAL OPERATIONS

Admiral E. W. Eberle Asks For More Funds

WORK CHIEFLY REPAIRS

Progress In High Frequency Work In Radio Held Marvellous By Chief of Operations

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Although the material condition of naval ships was somewhat improved during the last fiscal year, Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of naval operations, declared in his annual report that because of inadequacy of funds "many alterations of military value have been held in abeyance."

Due to lack of sufficient funds, he explained, the upkeep of the fleet had been confined chiefly to repairs.

"Every effort continues to be directed toward expenditures for upkeep only," he said. "The only purpose of any alteration is to effect improvement in Naval science, in which the United States has so long led, constantly demands improvements, but the funds available do not permit making the improvement."

Shore Establishments Costly
"It is obvious that the maintenance of the industrial shore establishments in excess of the material needs of the fleet makes heavy inroads on funds. This condition will always result from the operation of the fleet at other than the maximum capacity. The work loads at none of the industrial yards during the past year have approximated more than one-half of the physical capacity of the plant. The same is true of the maintenance of purely military stations in reduced operations."

Operations of the navy were reviewed broadly in the report, mentioning being especially made of the beneficial results of the tactical exercises carried out in the various units of the fleet as well as of "the decided benefit" obtained from the tactical and strategical maneuvers of the fleet in Hawaiian waters.

"The usual forms of gunnery exercises," the report continued, "have been carried out together with a number of exercises designed to simulate advanced gunnery methods. The need of a radio-controlled target for certain gunnery problems, has again been emphasized."

Shanghai Fighting Prevented
Mentioning the Asiatic fleet as progressing "in both tactical and strategical training for its special employment," the report recounted "how that unit with other fleets in September and October, 1924, kept open Shanghai and prevented fighting in the city."

Dealing with naval communications, Admiral Eberle described the progress made in high frequency radio transmission as "phenomenal."

"The outstanding progress made during the past year," he said, "has been the development of high frequency circuits and the handling of considerable traffic by that means. The increase in traffic handled by high frequency during the last half of the year has been phenomenal. A large number of naval vessels, including some assigned to the naval reserve, have constructed high-frequency sets which have been used advantageously in procuring data and conducting tests in high-frequency communications."

Many Traffic Reached
"Regular traffic has been exchanged on high frequencies between Washington, D. C.; Baltimore, Conn.; San Francisco, Calif.; San Diego, Calif.; Honolulu, Hawaii; Tutuila, Samoa, and the United States fleet. Although the work has been experimental and is as yet by no means fully reliable, it has effected a considerable saving in power through non-use for long periods of the high-power transmitters. In addition to this, traffic has been moved on high frequencies at times when owing to atmospheric conditions, the normal frequencies were impossible of use, thus effecting savings on land-line tolls."
