DAILY MARKET REPORT

(Oregon Journal Market Review)

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 17.—All top score eggs were again lower on the dairy exchange for the session. Values were off 1c for the three tops grades, the two lower ones being unchanged. Extras were down to 54c dozen.

Despite all talk to the contrary the market for eggs is being lowered as a result of greater supply of fresh goods than demand at the moment. It is true that little resistance is shown by operators against the declining tendency. The trade as a rule feels that it would be impossible to make more than temporary pause in the price lowering movement.

Contrary to the belief of some interests the declines are not being aided by private dealers generally. Some of the private dealers still retain liberal stocks of storage eggs. These are netting them some very serious losses. Naturally they are not inclined to still lower the price and force themselves to take additional loss. Every cent that the fresh egg market drops the storage price drops from 1 to 2 cents dozen.

Butter Trading Rules Quiet

Trading in the butter market is rather quiet. There was no further change in prices for the day and while cubes were stationary on the dairy exchange, further concessions were reported on the open market.

Chicken Demand Quite Keen

Quite keen demand continues for both live and dressed chickens along the wholesale way. Receipts are inadequate to take care of current demand and former full prices are continued.

Veal Situation Now Easier

Because of the presence of considerable range stuff on the Front street market, country-killed calves are showing a slightly easier tone generally. Sales are 15@16c. Hogs are steady with 15½@16c pound.

More Smelt Now Arriving

There is a very fair increase in the receipts of Columbia river smelt, but good salmon is rather scarce. Frozen halibut is finding favor at 18@20c pound, according to quality.

Potato Market Is Very Sick

Potatoes are showing a very sick tone. Practically no country trading in carloads is reported but growers are showing a disposition to hunt buyers instead of the latter seeking supplies. This fully explains the situation. Jobbing prices generally mixed and lower.

Brief Notes of Wholesale Trade

Onion prices being lowered generally. Oranges are lower, some selling below actual replacement cost.

Bananas are cheaper in the country than in Portland, a result of another fight.

Sweet potatoes are selling as low as 4c pound in the country tributary to Portland, while 4@4 1-4c is asked here. Actual cost to wholesalers above selling price.

Cranberry market shows a good movement of northwest stock at $4.00@4.25 box generally; few $4.50. Very little doing in eastern stock.

Shippers' Weather Notice

Weather bureau advised Thursday: Protect shipments during the next 24 hours against the following minimum temperatures: Going south to Seattle, 18 degrees; northeast to Spokane, 20 degrees; east to Baker, 20 degrees, and south to Ashland, 32 degrees. Minimum temperature at Portland tonight about 44 degrees.
