THE FUR SEASON ADVANCES IN SMART ARRAY

Pelts of New Suppleness for the Evening, a Flare for the Afternoon and the Spotted Jungle Cats for Sports Proclaim the Mode for Winter the age of a turkey, but these tests are not infallible so far as picking out a good tender turkey is concerned. Almost any turkey may be cooked so that it is tender, but it is of course easier to roast a turkey in an ordinary covered pan, if cooking a turkey is that by which the flesh is kept moist and juicy. Cooking it in a covered roaster with a little water in the bottom in a carefully regulated oven will prevent it from drying out. The cover should be removed at the end of the cooking period for browning the turkey and it must be basted frequently. The heat should be reduced after the turkey begins to brown. As the water in the roasting pan will gradually cook away it must be renewed from time to time. If the turkey is being cooked in an ordinary covered pan, it is a good plan to put a few strips of bacon or a layer of stuffing across the breast to keep the flesh moist. For older turkey the covered roaster is more necessary. The time for cooking may vary from an hour and a half to four or five hours, according to the age and size of the turkey. Success in cooking a turkey or any poultry depends on close attention throughout the time the bird is in the oven.

The custom of having a turkey for Christmas dinner dates back to the early New England settlers, who found turkeys wild and highly recommended by the Indians. Domestic turkeys are at their prime this time of the year, and their size makes them suitable for serving to a good many people, so that the custom for practical reasons, has continued down to the present.

Fur Trimming Is Motif

that have retained their popularity through the year. It is to be found in the new lines which Paris has decreed for the coming winter. The accompanying furs of established appeal are to be found in the cat family which include leopard, panther, wildcat, civet cat, mink, lynx and the stenciled furs which represent the leopard family.

The skin of the gazelle, seal, pony and antelope are new in the field of fur coats for semi-daytime appearances. The racoon, which always the choice for outdoor sports occasions, remains true to its football traditions and appears again in the season in dark pelts in the very chic tomboy model.

Nutria, too, is coming to the fore in sports coats. It divides its favor with the sky beaver which not only appears in straightline sports coats but also boasts a flare and a type of coat that is worn well into the afternoon.

A word must be said for the lady muskrat which is developed in coats for almost every occasion in a season which finds new uses for this pelt. Both in its dyed (Madison seal) state and in its own natural or silver coloring, it is used to fashion many of the smartest coats. The silks are sewed in arrangements which make for femininity as well as variety.

Casual in all the bronze, beige and brown tones of winter apparel and smartly for the afternoon or evening wrap. The platinum shade in caracal is also much used and finds itself in a season's worth of a most effective accompaniment both along the border, which is apt to flare, or along the neck, revers, collar and cuffs.

Squirrel, in its natural gray hue, or in the new copper dyed shade, is found popular in a season which boasts new furs, squirrel continues to combine itself harmoniously with pelts of other animals and achieves a smart note in the afternoon and evening wraps.

Ermine still finds itself in the evening wraps. Its snowy beauty portrays the new silhouette in a most successful way because of its suppleness. The flare which is seen in the wraps is particularly effective in ermine.

Mink, in the new lines, is perhaps the richest and most favored of all furs. It lends itself to almost every occasion of the afternoon and the formal evening wrap. The softness of the skin enables it to boast the godet effect, or the sweeping flare at the hemline as well as the new bell shaped sleeves which share favor with the mandarin lines of equal neatness and popularity.

Chinchilla is always a favorite in the fur mode for evening and is particularly beautiful this season in the loose wrap lines.

The combination of furs shares in importance the lines of the fur coat and wrap. Fox, lynx, monkey and skunk are successfully applied when they share their beauty with the short haired pelts of the mink, ermine, squirrel, seal, mole and the caracal.

The combination of furs, however, do not limit themselves to the short haired skins, but nutria and beaver are frequently smartly used with sports furs that are flat, white mole and squirrel, seal and ermine and other combinations of short furs are used with very stunning results.

In general, fur coats with a flare stand highest in chic. Fur capes also lend smartness, while godets and odd pairings of long haired furs, achieve a newness that is much to be desired. The straightline, or wrappy coats, are still in favor in both sports and formal types, however.

In general, the furs smartly seen this season are sable, ermine, mink, Alaskan seal, chinchilla, mole, squirrel (dyed and natural), astrakhan, kolinsky, dyed ermine, beaver, nutria, opossum, badger, rabbit, fox, badger, lynx, goat, wolf, antelope, gazelle and all the cat family.

The things are most important and share their beauty with the furs, themselves. The brocades, metallic materials and crepe silks richly and brilliantly embroidered show the tendencies of the mode towards brilliance for the winter.

Dorothy Mackall, film star, wears an evening wrap of rare charm which uses ermine and black fox in one of the season's favorite combinations — black and white. The wrap possesses the new and smart flare and is exquisitely lined.

St. Louis, Ill., have yet to overcome the child's aversion to the "bugger," for only about 30 per cent of fifth graders pay them an annual visit.

The tests indicated that 73 per cent of fifth grade children have been vaccinated against smallpox. Lexington, Ky., and New Britain, Conn., were best protected against that disease, with 100 per cent and 98 per cent respectively. New England cities are indicated to have the most children protected by vaccination with a figure of 92 per cent. The cities of the East south central and south Atlantic states stand second and third in this respect. Vaccination is least common in the west north central and Pacific coast cities, the percentages being 41 and 51 respectively.

The association finds that great progress is being made in the schools in teaching health to children. There are 46 cities of the United States which have established definite courses in health education, and 11 cities have appointed supervisors of training methods in health instruction. The importance of training teachers in health instruction and efforts are being made by the association to have courses established in all teacher training institutions.

Selecting Your Turkey for Christmas
Plenty of Flesh on Fowl Means Plenty of Meat for Carving and There Should Be Generous Amount of Fat.

When you select your turkey for Christmas, one of the chief considerations is the amount and quality of flesh on the body, especially on the breast, back and hips. Plenty of flesh means plenty of meat for carving and there should also be a generous amount of fat to insure a moist, tender turkey. The French always expose a turkey in the market with the back up so the housewife can better observe how plump the bird is.

THE flare and flutter of the winter mode has definitely replaced the vogue for things masculine in line and detail. The lavish use of furs on dresses, suits, coats and wraps share with the flare the honor of bringing the feminine trend back to popularity.

It is not chic to possess fur trimmings merely along the border, collar and cuffs of the garment. Nowadays the fur is used in intricate cut and is distributed with an eye to beauty and chic.

Fur godets afford one interesting manner of trimming the more formal ensemble for the afternoon. For treatment in triangles and patches, uplift coats and jackets from the mediocre. In general, the fur border leaves the hem for high-collared places and is found very smart in stole effect down the entire front of the coat.

New and upstanding collars of fur afford a new note in winter fashions, while broad revers also introduce a smart outline. The jabot effect, which is both new and smart, is frequently found effective in fur, or in a fur edging.

Materials for every hour of the day are found in the smart shops. Constance Talmadge, her Parisian film, wears a very stunning suit suited to the formal appearances of the daytime. It is of brilliant material smartly furred in white fox and for contrast intricately trimmed with black velvet and black buttons.

All Sorts of Pleats in Southern Styles
The flare is very decidedly absent in southern clothes, according to the Dry Goods Economist, but fullness is not, especially for dresses—coats are usually straight. And pleats are the least means of obtaining fullness for new season frocks. In fact, they seem to be the most important factor. Side pleats, box pleats, novelty pleatings—all kinds or pleatings are good. A real neogotico coming down seen on Fifth Avenue has a skirt that is side pleated all around. At the center of each step is a band of gold bead and pearl embroidery, which gives the effect of a tabbed skirt.

HEALTH HABITS OF YOUR CHILD

How Much Milk Does He Drink? How Many Hours of Sleep Does He Get? He May Be Only Third-Rater

NEW YORK—How much milk does your child drink? How many hours of sleep does he get? You will surely be a star parent if merely a third rater. In these respects by comparing with the standard American child, a description of whom has just been published by the American Child Health Association of which Herbert Hoover is president.

The association made an extensive study last year of the health of the child in different parts of the country. As part of their inquiry they gave special tests to children of the fifth grade in order to find out their health habits. As described in the report, "A Health Survey of 86 Cities," information was gathered from 1,000 children in 86 cities scattered over thirty-one different states of the country with populations in 1920 of 40,000 to 70,000.

Here are some of the daily habits of the average American child of the fifth grade:

Wakes at 6 minutes after 7 in the morning.

Goes to bed at 5 minutes of 9.

Has 10 hours and 11 minutes sleep.

Drinks 1.4 glasses of milk.

Takes a bath once a week.

Usually brushes his teeth at least once a day.

Visits the dentist about once in two years.

Has your child around 11 or 12 hours of age can beat this record, shows the average.

The health habits of children vary greatly in different parts of the country. In Massachusetts and California children lead the race in long hours of sleep. Salem and New York, Mass., first; Berkeley, Calif., third; Quincy, Mass., fourth; and Stockton, Calif., fifth. In Salem, New York, 91 per cent of the fifth graders have 10 hours or more sleep. Berkeley's figure is 89 per cent. Quincy's 89, and Stockton's 88. Huntington, W. Va., and Charleston, S. C. must have been reading about Thomas Edison, for only 45 per cent of fifth graders in these cities get 10 hours or more sleep in a week.

The children first to heat the alarm clock in the morning are those of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Montgomery, Ala.; and Springfield, Ohio. Those who linger under the covers the longest live in Butler, Mont.; Wheeling, W. Va.; and Hoboken and Atlantic City, N. J.

The children of Newton are the first in bed at night for 92 per cent turn out the light before 9:10. Fresno, Cal., is second with 89 per cent; and Quincy, Mass., third with 87 per cent. In McKeesport, Pa., only 22 per cent of fifth graders are in bed before 9:15.

The state milk drinkers are located in East Orange, N. J.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Newton, Salem and Holyoke, Mass.; in East Orange 82 per cent of children drink a pint or more of milk daily. The average in Newton is 2.4 glasses a day. The children in Charleston average only 0.3 glasses and Portsmouth, Va., 0.6.

The report states that 88 per cent of fifth grade children drink a pint or more of milk daily, but that 22 per cent get no milk at all. Coffee and other hot, stimulant drinks cut down the milk consumption. The more cups of coffee daily consumed only one-fourth to one-fifth as much milk as those who do not drink coffee.

The children in Charleston drink 2.4 glasses of milk daily. The children of Perth Amboy, N. J., the percentage is 74. Hoboken 71, and Hamtramck, Mich., 70 per cent.

The children in Montgomery, Ala.; Winston-Salem, N. C.; and Tampa, Fla., are most faithful in brushing their teeth.

The dentist is most popular in East Orange, where 84 per cent of fifth graders had their teeth looked over during the preceding year. The dentists of Terre Haute, Ind., Montgomery, Ala., and East
