EXCLUSION OF FRUIT AND ROSE STOCKS PROBABLE

Plea of Nurserymen, Florists Will Be Heeded

SUPPLY HERE ADEQUATE

Department of Agriculture Considers an Announcement Made at Conference, June 29

The department of agriculture considers the information announced at the conference held June 29, 1925, that the recommendations relative to future restrictions on the entry of fruit and rose stocks, presented by the American association of nurserymen and by the American florists and ornamental horticulturists, would be acceptable to the department as a tentative basis of action. The American association of nurserymen recommended that the date of exclusion of fruit stocks should not be earlier than July 1, 1928, and the growers and users of rose stocks recommended that it should not be earlier than June 1, 1929.

In making these recommendations the nurserymen's statement includes the suggestion that the members of the association should cooperate with the American growers of seedling fruit stocks and rose stocks in their efforts to organize and develop production to the extent that it may be reasonably depended upon as an adequate source of supply.

It was recommended that a conference on rose stocks be called following the meeting of the American association of nurserymen in June, 1928, for the purpose of determining the availability at that time of American stocks in satisfactory quantity and quality as a basis for the exclusion of foreign stocks. It was also recommended that, prior to such conference, the department make a thorough investigation of the production of such stocks in the United States.

The department, in accepting these recommendations, does not obligate itself to call an earlier conference and take earlier action should any new or serious emergency arise. It also recommends that the rose and fruit stock situations be taken up at the proposed conference in June, 1928.

Nurserymen Prime Movers

It may be noted that the committee of last June was called, not at the instance of the department, but at the request of leading nurserymen and florists for the purpose of considering the advisability of restricting the importation of fruit and rose stocks. It was the belief of these nurserymen and florists that the time had arrived when it was desirable to consider whether home production was not such, or would soon become such, as to render unnecessary the further importation of such stocks with the attendant risk of pest introduction. It will be recalled that in the public consideration in 1918 of the restrictions which are now incorporated under quarantine 37, it was recommended that there was a vital horticultural necessity for the continued entry of certain items—stocks, cuttings, scions, and buds of fruits—to make possible the continuation of an important food production industry. As a result, the enforcement of the restrictions provided for under the quarantine was deferred as to such items, with the understanding that with the termination of such quarantine the risk would no longer be accepted. At the same time a similar demand was made and accepted for rose stocks.

Risk of Pests Shown

The risk of the entry of pests with such stocks had been clearly shown even before the passage of the plant quarantine act in 1912, and, in fact, such infestation was one of the important dangers which led to the passage of this act. The attempt to eliminate this risk by foreign inspection and certification and such reinspection as possible in this country at destination points, is yearly demonstrating that the risk remains after enforcement of these safeguards is much too great to warrant a continuance of authority to import such stocks beyond the period of real horticultural necessity. That that period had largely passed and that adequate supplies of most of such stocks from home sources are either available or could within a reasonable period be made so seems a growing conviction of a considerable element of the nursery and other interests concerned in the production and utilization of such stocks. This conclusion is supported also by the department's own information.

It will be recalled that at the 1918 public hearing referred to, in the recognition of the necessity of terminating this risk at the earliest practicable moment, it was recommended that the department should undertake a countrywide study of the problem of home production of fruit and rose stocks to determine the most favorable conditions from the standpoint of locality, climate, cultural methods, etc. This work was later duly authorized by congress and is so far advanced that it was possible to make fairly definite recommendations at the conference with respect to the availability of important classes of such stocks in adequate quantities in the near future.

OREGON MEN ARE HELD

ROBBERY CHARGE FACED IN CALIFORNIA COURT

(By The Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 21.—Donald Kelly, alias Ernest Young, and L. O. Gillian, alias Jack Raymond, are being held in jail here on charges of attempted robbery. Both are ex-convicts, according to police records.

Kelly was released from Oregon state penitentiary on a conditional pardon last July. Gillian was convicted of robbery here in 1925, and was released on two years probation. Both men said they had been working in Oregon before coming to Oakland, where they were arrested.

Kelly's wife Grace, step-daughter of A. W. Stann, of Medford, Ore., is being cared for at a detention home. She married Kelly at Medford December 7.

Leta, Gillian's wife, is being housed by the Salvation Army until she can find employment. Both women declared their intention of standing by their husbands.

A Desk for the Family at Christmas Time

"Breathes there a man" who wouldn't like a desk like this West-Made at home? It gives him a little "private sanctum" where he can keep his papers and possessions—a place to write letters, to think, or study. Whether he is fourteen or forty, he'll like the roomy convenience of the new West-Made Home Desk! But won't need to be urged to get his lessons if he's provided with a real desk! Dad will be delighted with it. The West-Made Home Desk is a wonderful gift. Almost any man would be made happy with it; (we suggest that he make himself a present if there is no other way!)

Delicate and finished of line, made of beautiful hardwoods, fitted with metal drawer pulls, the West-Made Home Desk is a good-looking piece of furniture. The price is very reasonable.
