DAILY MARKET REPORT

(Oregon Journal Market Review) PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 23.—Hitting of the California price brought about slight recovery of eggs on the dairy market, but this condition was by no means reflected on the open market.

There appears a surplus of eggs in this territory and while California probably will take out some stock because of the bad weather there, the outlet is not sufficient to keep the market up.

Cold storage interests continue to seek an outlet for their offerings, with nearly any established price. Some of the storage goods has been moving to California recently, a condition most unusual at this period of the season.

Receipt of eggs are now so liberal that the trade already is talking of the probable price that will rule for the storage input. Some storage goods' storage season will start earlier than in any recent year, but weather conditions are likely to be the chief influence.

Butter Situation Is Weak Market for butter is ruling weak with a change in the price of prints or cuts generally, although some shading of the latter is indicated on the open market.

Veal Supplies Are Smaller Smaller supplies of country-killed calves are shown along the wholesale way with demand better. Sales are shown at 16 1/2 to 17 1/2 per pound for tops. Hogs about steady at recent prices.

Apple Trade at Standstill Trade in apples is practically nil at Pacific Northwest primary points for the last few days. Prices are being slightly

Everything was serene in the life of F. W. Brigham, Los Angeles, until his wife, Marian, calling at his office, was told he was out, but had sent a box of candy to the baby. Inquiry, she said, showed there was another Mrs. Brigham, Ruth.

Orange Prices Are Better

With large-sized stock rather scarce, market for oranges was in better shape generally during the Wednesday trade. Prices generally were at $4.25 to $4.50 box for the fancy fruit.

Fresh Salmon Is Very Scarce

Salmon mostly from fresh salmon, due to the muddy water in the Columbia, has forced the trade here to bring in "salmon" from Puget Sound. These are mostly at 17 1/2. Silverides are very scarce at 17 1/2 and a few steelheads are arriving at 22 1/2 per pound.

Brief Notes of Wholesale Trade

Loss of the Jap cargoes are here, except where otherwise noted. Extreme shortage of almond nuts. Artichokes finding good sale, with some California $1.50 to $1.75 dozen. Cranberry market steady, with most of the local being cleaned up.

Banana prices are being held firm, with some improvement in the market. California market overvalued with California at $1.50 per case.

The First Christmas Tree It was 1260 years ago, atop a snow covered hill in the wilds of central Germany, that the Christmas tree was born. There, on Christmas eve, had gathered a congregation of half-civilized pagans to witness the slaying of a little child on the altar of the Great God Thor. Under the massive "Thundering Oak" the sacred fire flickered, the stage was all set for the sacrifice. As the priest's hammer was lifted St. Boniface, sent to carry Christianity to the "barbarians," rushed on the scene. He denounced the folly of such cruelty and cut down the sacred oak before the very eyes of the astonished mob. "Look you to heaven for your God," he pleaded. "Take this little Evergreen, which points to heaven, in the place of the low hanging Oak of Thor." And from then to this day the Evergreen has been the symbol of Christmas.
